PIRATE SHIP CAPTURED

SUSPENDS COPS AFTER FIST FIGHT

Commissioner Wilson Orders Probe of Hectic Battle on Station House Steps

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson today suspended two Roxbury patrolmen for fighting on the steps of Station Four on Dudley street while a crowd of appreciative spectators cheered.

One of the contestants was taken to City Hospital for treatment for injuries to the head, face and eyes.

The injured officer is Francis T. Cahill, twenty-six years old, of No. 37 Woodward street, South Boston. He engaged in fisticuffs with Lemuel F. Doyle, also attached to the station.

Francis T. Cahill

Although the officers have not been suspended, they have both given written reports of the fight between them to Lieutenant Chandler. Captain Fitzgerald, who is away at present, is expected to investigate the encounter.

According to witnesses, Doyle met Cahill coming down the steps of the station. He gave him a push and hit him. Cahill retorted and the pair were only separated by fellow officers, who rushed out of the station.

FITCHBURG ALARMED BY 3D EXPLOSION

Fitchburg, Aug. 21.—A mysterious explosion, the third to occur here within several weeks, took place on Rollstone Hill, frightening residents in all parts of the city. Police found gun powder strewn on a boulder on the hill and automobile tracks leading from the hill. Residents nearby told the police they heard the automobiles. The first two explosions which occurred recently were attributed by the police to the Ku Klux Klan.

Wounds His Wife, Then Shoots Out His Only Eye

Pittsburgh, Penn., Aug. 21.—Walter Kruczew, forty-two, a steel worker of McKeesport, after shooting his wife through the head, while she was holding her three-year-old babe in her arms, turned the gun on himself and shot out his left eye. If Kruczek recovers he will be blind as his right eye is artificial.

The child, Theresa, fell to the floor and was injured about the head. Kruczek was found still alive. Both he and his wife were taken to a hospital where it is said their chances of recovery are slight.

LOSE RIGHT TO SELL STOCK

Rights of Alan C. Eveleth and Rudolph Blick to sell stock was revoked by the State Department of Public Utilities following their failure to answer for neglect to supply their business addresses and the names of employers.

The State found in favor of Martin J. Caulfield and William J. Young. Young acquired about fifty shares of Bankers Security Corporation stock at $15 a share and Caulfield got about twenty shares at $10 a share from the executor of the Fowle estate in Woburn who was anxious to close the affairs of the estate.

The both sold the stock for about $50 a share and made a profit for themselves while complaining investors charged they had been gulled into paying more than the sale value of the stock. The Department held that both Young and Caulfield were guiltless of misrepresentation, but revoked Young's license because of a technical defect in his registration.

The Department today restored the rights of Roland T. LaRose and the Northwest Metals Corporation.

of the Republican National Committee when reorganization is effected for the 1924 campaign. Definite overtures have been made to him, it was learned, to give up his position as director general of the movie interests and get back into the political game as the Republican manager. These overtures come from Coolidge boosters, who already are laying wires to land the nomination for the President.

The youngster's neck was broken and he was dead when he reached Notre Dame Hospital. The child was playing near the lumber, which was piled beside the excavation for the cellar of a new house near his own home.

MISS HAYES CHARGES SLANDER

Nussbaum, Her Former Suitor, Indicted Here for Criminal Libel

Dave Nussbaum, vaudeville pianist who leaped into headlines in Boston newspapers a month back when he charged Gertrude Hayes, Jr., comely burlesque actress had been his common law wife and was engaged to marry him, following announcement of Gertie's intentions to wed another was arrested in New York today.

He is charged with criminal libel. He was arrested on a warrant from this city. He was secretly indicted last Saturday by the Grand Jury. Inspectors Finn and Flaherty left Boston today to bring Nussbaum here for trial.

Miss Hayes has since become the wife of Joseph H. Laffey, wealthy Malden widower. It was announcement of her plans to wed Laffey which prompted Nussbaum to rush into Boston with the charges for which he must now stand trial.

Miss Hayes at the time indignantly denied she had ever been anything but a friend to Nussbaum. With her mother she procured evidence from a physician which she took to the district attorney's office. An investigation led to Nussbaum's indictment.

For a time Nussbaum's making public of a batch of ardent love epistles which he said the dashing burlesque actress had written him, made the proceedings smack of press agentry.

But when the girl who once sang in Boso Snyder's "Follies of the Day" went and announced she was through with the stage, Nussbaum's allegations took on a different aspect.

Nussbaum entered a suit of $50,000 against Laffey, charging alienation of affections. It has not reached court.

Both men are believed to have been instantly killed.

RICH HAVERHILL KLEPTOMANIAC PAYS $50 FINE

Haverhill, Aug. 21.—An unusual story of the career of a kleptomaniac was told in the Central District Court concerning Ernest Simone of No. 34 Grove street. He is the son of a wealthy local building contractor, and married. He was charged with larceny of a pocketbook valued at $25 from Howard F. Howe, real estate agent.

Captain Irving G. Hussey told Judge Daniel J. Cavan that Simone confessed a year ago to half a dozen pocketbook robberies and made restitution of $100. Two years ago, he said, the man stole a large sum from a Haverhill family, and less than a year ago was sentenced to eighteen months in Providence for auto larceny.

He was pardoned, Captain Hussey continued, and a few months ago was arrested here for the Detroit police on a similar charge. Taken to Detroit, Simone was able to make arrangements which resulted in the charges being dropped. The same thing happened in New York.

Judge Cavan imposed a fine of $50 after Simone had pleaded guilty to the larceny of the pocketbook.

2 KILLED, 47 HURT, AT NEW YORK FIRE

New York, Aug. 21 (A.P.)—Two firemen were killed and forty-seven injured in a fire that swept an old three-story brick block in Brooklyn today.

The death toll is expected to grow as the fire ruins are searched by rescue parites. The dead and injured were trapped by the collapse of a blazing roof and walls.

The two dead firemen are Raymond Farrell and James Sullivan, both members of the same engine company.

Six of the injured may die.

The fire was in the New Plaza Hall, Grand and Havermeyer streets. First reports placed the dead at ten.

The fire was of mysterious origin.

Firemen found a stubborn blaze, and, as the building was in the heart of a close-packed tenement district, three additional fire alarms were rung in.

Working under the glare of a half dozen hastily-erected arc lights, the fire fighters apparently had the fire under control at 2 o'clock. The curious crowd had begun to disperse. A scope of firemen were on the lower floor with hoses.

Six bank and ladder men were taking hoses roofward by way of the

MAIL TRAIN ROBBED BY MASKED BANDITS

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 21 (AP)—Five masked bandits looted the mail and express cars of a Missouri, Kansas & Texas train near Okesa, Okla., today and escaped with twenty registered packages after overpowering the train crew. No estimate of the value of the loot is available.

Posses directed by the sheriff of Osage County are scouring the county around Okesa for the bandits, who fled in motor cars.

It is believed the band numbered a dozen, although only five men participated in the robbery.

R. D. Towers, fireman of the train was in a Pawhuska hospital today with a probable fracture of the skull from a blow on the head with a heavy revolver. Engineer Miller and Mail Clerks C. D. Weiss and W. Burch were beaten by the bandits, but sustained no serious injuries.

Passengers were not molested and many slept through the holdup which occurred one mile south of Okesa in Osage County, home of a daring band of bank robbers, captained by Al Spencer, most notorious outlaw of present-day Oklahoma.

FINEBERGS RIVAL FINNEGANS IN BOSTON'S NEW DIRECTORY

Boston's new city directory is out. Mulling the directory is fine indoor sport. Boston is known as the largest Catholic city in the United States. Still one finds the Finns, Finnemans, and Finnegans being run ragged by the Fineberge, Finebaums, Finesteins and Finkelsteins. But the Levys and Levines take the dust of the Murphys. It requires twenty-three columns to get all the Murphys in.

There are quite a few Fish in the new book, several Henry Fords—no inference meant—one Jimmy, one motherly person, an innocent man, several Wise persons and Moses appears about thirty times. Believe it or not, but there is one Grounder and nine Flyes, a lot of Wax and you can even find Lickor—Rempt, a machinist.

Carl Jung, Roxbury teamster, has a touch break. His only other namesake is Lee Wong, Chinese restauranter. Lee also lives in Roxbury

'DEVIL'S GRIP' HITS BOSTON; DOCTORS SEE NO EPIDEMIC

A wave of intestinal influenza, called "the Devil's Grip" is sweeping the Atlantic seaboard, according to health bulletins received here.

Massachusetts and the rest of New England are comparatively free from this disease and health authorities here do not expect an epidemic.

The "Devil's Grip" is known by its griping pains, diarrhea, chills, fever and often a cold in the head.

According to Dr. Edmund W. Wilson, assistant superintendent of City Hospital, it is not usually serious for the victims recover ordinarily in a couple of days.

Both he and Dr. Ardreas F. Christian, respiratory expert of Buck Bay, say there is no need for alarm here as there is a mere handful of cases in Boston and two of these now under care of Dr. Christian, contracted the sickness in New York where a large number of cases have been reported.

LARGEST PLANE READY TO FLY WILL WEIGH 40,000 POUNDS

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 20.—The Barling bomber, largest airplane in the world, is scheduled to take off from Wilbur Wright Field here on its maiden flight at six o'clock tomorrow evening.

Mechanics have gone over every part of the craft to see that it shall stand the heavy strain when it takes the air fully loaded and weighing forty thousand pounds.

Lieutenant Harold R. Harris will pilot the ship, assisted by Lieutenant M. Fairchild, Walter Henry Barling, designer of the plane and Douglas Culver, engineer.

FEWER WORKERS ON ROLLS BAY STATE SURVEY SHOWS

The State Department of Labor and Industries conducted a survey of 684 plants employing 221,321 people, about one-third the average number of wage-earners normally employed in manufacturing in Massachusetts.

The number of employes has dropped off, in a month, 4,182 or 1.9 per cent.; the payroll from $5,814,713 a week to 5,413,845, or 3.2 per cent., and the average weekly earnings of all employees has fallen from $21.80 to $24.16, or 1.4 per cent.

TRAIN HITS AUTO; 2 DEAD, 2 HURT

Dunkirk, N. Y., Aug. 21 (I.N.S.).—A boy and girl are dead and another young couple are in the hospital in serious condition as a result of the automobile in which they were riding being smashed to fragments by the Pennsylvania railroad midnight flyer at a grade crossing here.

The dead are Herbert Rollof, 21, of Fredonia and Martha Roetowski, 18, of Dunkirk.

The injured are Walter Orcutt, 18, and Martha Betrzowski, 17, both of Dunkirk.

FORMERLY THE SLOOP GREYHOUND

Buccaneers, Themselves Rum-Runners, Wounded 2 in Battle on Schooner

While search was being made along the whole Eastern seaboard from Gloucester to Portland for the pirates who boarded a Nova Scotia rum runner sixteen miles off Gloucester late Monday, shot and badly wounded the skipper and cook and then escaped with $100, the pirate boat was found today sinking. It had been scuttled and abandoned.

It was towed into Pavilion Beach, Gloucester, and less there, half-filled with water. It is a converted sloop, once the Greyhound. Letters were removed, but the letter outlines still show. Its motor power registry number is K 12113.

A sawed-off lowspirit and battered after rail, along with a pilot house on deck answer the dscription given by the wounded cook. The vessel is only twenty feet long, painted a dark, dingy gray.

ALL RUM RUNNERS.

Second in importance to the finding of the pirate ship, by Captain David Keating of the boat "Victor," adrift off Thatchers Islands, came the revelation that the pirates were themselves rum runners. They were able to board Nova Scotia rum runner schooner J. Scott Hankinson because they were known to have bought cases of whiskey from the skipper before. They bootlegged out of Gloucester.

While his skipper, Captain Arthur Moore of Westport, N. S., lay dying in the Addison Gilbert Hospital, Gloucester, with three bullets in his abdomen, Harry Harm, wounded ship's cook told the story of the piracy to Dr. H. E. Whitaker, hospital surgeon. The cook has three

ARRESTED FOR FAILURE TO PAY INCOME TAX

John V. Colcough of Metropolitan Boulevard, Wellesley Farms, said to be a widely known stock salesman, was arretsed today by John B. Buckley of the State income tax department for failure to pay his 1922 and 1923 taxes, amounting to $73 and $17.45, respectively. State officials have refused to make any statement as to whether this presaged a general roundup of tax delinquents.

MARTIAL LAW IN TULSA RELAXES

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 21. (AP)—The grip of martial law, imposed on Tulsa and a portion of Tulsa county by Governor J. C. Walton, because of mob activities, relaxed somewhat today but there was no lessening of the intensive inquiry by state authorities into flogging cases. Twenty of the 150 national guardsmen sent here have been ordered home. The military authorities took into custody five citizens of Broken Arrow in connection with the flogging in 1920 of Leonard Bagby.

bullets in his body but he has an even chance to recover.

He lives in Weymouth, N. S. Both wounded men have wives and six children each.

While he lacked the first mate was taking the rum runner back to Nova Scotia, the 3,000 cases of Scotch whiskey in its hold unsold.

THE COOK'S STORY.

Said Harris: "It was about 4:30 Monday afternoon. We were lying sixteen miles out. The watch had strict orders from the captain to let none aboard unless known. Along comes this craft with its wrecked rear deck rail and sawed off bow sprit.

"Two men come up the side and made the deck. I'm downstairs in the cabin with the skipper. They enter with drawn guns. 'Throw up your hands,' they say. The skipper reaches for a gun. They fire. So does the skipper. I grab a shotgun. But they closed in still blazing away and I couldn't get a chance to use it.

"Suddenly the room filled with men. Everybody had guns. We fought hand to hand and wrestled up on deck. We fought all over the deck. We licked these guys, herded 'em to the rail. It was a bloody mess.

There was the skipper with three slugs in his body, still fighting. He's in fighting fool that man. I was nicked, too, but didn't seem to feel it although my clothes were stained with blood and I began to get dizzy. We shot down one of their men. He slid all over the deck in blood. Then the skipper fell. The pirates retreated.

TOOK CAPTAIN'S CASH.

"Somebody frisked the captain and got his wallet with $150. He worked like an eel as they hacked away. They went over the side dragging the wounded man with 'em. Two others are left, also. How sad I dont know. They turned on their power and fled. Then I passed out of the picture."

Today United States marshals, a Boston revenue cutter and life guards searched for the pirates. It is believed they scuttled their ship, abandoned it in a row boat and made shore somewhere between Gloucester and Portland.

Following the piracy the crew of the rum runner turned their British flag upside down and rescue followed when the distress signal was sighted by Captain Russel C. Young and John P. Mattuga, Gloucester fishermen cruising ten miles off Cape Ann. They hurried the wounded men to Rockport and police removed them to the Gloucester hospital.

"Take her back to Nova Scotia," was the skipper's parting word to the mate, as he was lowered over the side in a hammock.

OFF COAST TEN DAYS.

The schooner had lain out to sea with her whiskey cargo for more than ten days. She left Nova Scotia three weeks ago.

The pirate ship was at a Gloucester landing tied up for almost a week. Three days ago it vanished.

As to identifying the pirates the wounded cook said:

"I'd know 'em anywhere. So would the skipper."

BROKER HELD IN THEFT OF $11,000

Worcester, Aug. 21—William S. Driver, fifty, a New York stock broker, was held in $15,000 bonds for a hearing on August 28 when he was arraigned in Central District Court on a charge of larceny of $11,000 from Miss Stella H. Plummer of No. 803 Main street, a prominent Worcester society woman.

Driver entered a plea of not guilty and asked for a continuance because his counsel was unable to reach Worcester.

Miss Plummer alleges that she gave Driver $11,000 with which to purchase control of a Western mining corporation, but he gave her worthless securities.

'BLUE MAN' DIES SILVER CAUSED SKIN COLOR

New York, Aug. 21.—Fred Walters, whose bright blue skin had made him a good living for many years in sideshows, died in Bellevue Hospital from heart disease.

Doctors made a careful examination of Walter's body, and discovered, to their amazement, that not only his skin, but all his organs and tissues, including brain, heart and muscles, were of the same brilliant color.

"The coloring" the doctors announced, "was due to 'argyria,' or chronic silver poisoning. Some forty years ago Walters is said to have worked in a mine in Australia. If that report is correct, it is probable while in the mine Walters breathed into his body nitrate of silver which turned him blue."

Walters, who was an officer in the 17th Regiment, Duke of Cambridge's Own Lancers, saw service in India. During manoeuvres he was thrown, and his horse fell on him. A theory expressed by European scientists was that this fall was responsible for his coloring.

EXCURSION TRUCKS MENACE AUTOISTS

Haverhill, Aug. 21—Slow moving trucks, turned into excursion conveyances, and loaded with men, women and children, headed for Hampton and Salisbury beaches, have become such a menace to automobile traffic on the Amesbury road to the beaches that Deputy Marshal Hiram W. Pearson of the local police will ask Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, to prevent them from using this road to get to the seashore. He says they can go by way of Newburyport.

21 U. S. PLANES FINISH FLIGHT TO BANGOR

Bangor, Me., Aug. 21.—Feasability of operating airplanes a long distance from their base was proved when the flying armada of twenty-one bombers arrived here from Langley Field, Va.

The planes which left Langley Field consumed eight and a half hours actual flying time.

The flight was ordered by Army officials "to demonstrate the feasibility of operating a large number of airplanes at some distance from their base." Fifteen of the airplanes landed on the Rich Farm, West Bangor, at 5:05 o'clock, eleven hours and fifty-five minutes after leaving Langley Field. The remaining six landed at 6:10 o'clock.

No mishaps were reported between Boston and Bangor.

Seven De Havilands Stop at East Boston to Refuel

The seven De Havilands which accompanied the maneuvering planes from Langley Field, Va., landed at the East Boston field at 4 p. m., to take on oil and gasoline. The bombers kept on their flight and soon disappeared from the sight of thousands of Bostonians.

Lieutenant Clayton Bissell, aide to Brigadier General Mitchell, was the first to make his appearance over Bourn, arriving in the capacity of "pathfinder" fifteen minutes before the main body of fliers. After filling up, he departed in the wake of the bombers, just as the other De Havilands appeared.

IN TOUCH BY RADIO.

The 240 mile flight from Mitchell field, New York to Boston was negotiated in 1¾ hours. During the entire flight, communication was maintained by radio between the various machines and the ground. Four days' equipment of supplies were a part of each plane's cargo. The maneuvers are said to be the greatest undertaking of the kind since the war.

Among the pilots of the bombers were: Captain E. C. Black, Lieutenants F. T. Booker, R. P. Cole, L. A. Smith, O. V. Gaffney, J. T. Griebaum, J. F. Whiteley, C. Shankle, W. Boyd and C. Austin. The De Havilands were operated by Major Junius Jones, Captain F. M. Brady, Lieutenants Rowland, Hutchinson, Valentine and Lindburg.

PICK UP COOK.

At Boston the party picked up Private Alvin E. Herman, cook of the outfit who, flying with one of the Martin bombers on the advance party last Saturday, "crashed" at South Attleboro. He is evidently an important member of the party, proving that an air squadron, as well as an army, "travels on its stomach."

DOG THAT BIT THREE GIRLS HAD RABIES

State Health authorities have declared, after examining the head of a dog sent to them by Dr. Norman T. Harris of the Revere Health Department, that the animal positively was afflicted with rabies.

The dog, a fox terrier, is known to have bitten Mildred Lamb, five years old, and her sister, Katharine Lamb, three years old, No. 37 Dashwood street, and Miss Alice Maguire, No. 104 Arcadia street, all of Oak Island, Revere. They have been ordered to take the Pasteur treatment. The terrier also bit several dogs.

Citizens, alarmed at the possible rabied condition of 1,000 dogs, most of them unlicensed, now running loose in Revere, are hunting dogs with clubs, firearms, and whatever other weapons are available.

Dr. Harris declared the only way to cure the mad dog menace, is to kill all unlicensed dogs, and to enforce a strict quarantine at the first appearance of rabies.

CAPTURE OF DE VALERA LAID TO FALSE PLEDGE

By O. F. BERTELLI
Universal Wireless.

Paris, Aug. 21.—What is declared to be the real truth relative to the arrest of Eamonn De Valera, the Irish Republican leader, was given out here by Chester Arthur and sponsored by Countess Gabrian, who was, before her marriage, Fanny Pithian.

"The British government stands back of the Irish Free State. De Valera's arrest was the consequence of a trap. Ireland officially was promised that the election would be free and that the voters would not be disturbed, no matter who they wished to vote for.

"Accordingly, De Valera, unarmed, called the meeting at Knnis, requesting all who came to appear without arms.

"Immediately the meeting began an armored car and a lorry full of soldiers appeared, firing rifles loaded with bullets, as was proved by the fact that women who shielded De Valera while he was lying on the platform were struck.

"The officer in command of the troops summoned De Valera to surrender, declaring unless he did fire would be opened upon the crowd."

2 KILLED, 47 HURT AT FIRE

A score of linesmen were on the roof, chopping at a cornice.

Without warning, a fifty-foot section of wall crashed in. A heavy steel girder, recently installed as an additional roof support, fell with the crumbling wall, and carried its burden with it. The wall crushed most of the linesmen on the ground floor under tons of debris.

Those on the fire escapes were carried with the wall into the burning pit. Six of the men on the roof were catapulted into the very heart of the building.

The seventh clung to a wooden beam which he had straddled; in its fall it twisted its living freight into space, clear of the wreckage. He was rescued, only slightly hurt.

A fifth alarm brought additional firemen as rescue workers; telephone calls summoned police reserves. The firemen tore at the hot bricks to get to their comrades.

SEARCH BURNING RUINS.

News of the tragedy apparently was carried on the winds, for within a few minutes vehicles of all kinds, wagons, limousines, commercial cars and taxicabs, crowded about. The police lined up the taxicabs for possible emergency use. Thirty ambulances from nearby hospitals also were summoned.

BOOZE FOR BANGOR FAIR WEEK SEIZED

Bangor, Me., Aug. 21—Acting on a tip that a large amount of alcohol had been shipped here from Boston for the Fair Week trade, Federal officers raided the premises of Louis Weinstein, No. 178 York street, and seized 396 quarts of various kinds of liquor and six gallons of alcohol.

LAUGH SAVED LIFE OF MISS ALDRICH

Seal Harbor, Me., Aug. 21—Miss Lucy T. Aldrich, daughter of the late United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich and sister of Congressman Richard S. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, is at the home of her sister, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., here to recuperate from the effects of being held prisoner by bandits in the Mongolian hills of China in May, last.

Lucy T. Aldrich

Miss Aldrich arrived in San Francisco from China, August 9, and has crossed the continent by slow stages. She is expected to remain in Seal Harbor until late in September, when she will return to her home in Providence.

Miss Aldrich said she was sleeping in her compartment on the Shanghai-Peking express when the bandits wrecked the train and took her prisoner, last May. Clad only in a kimono, she was marched back into the hills at the point of a bayonet, with the others.

Part way up the hills Miss Aldrich fell from exhaustion. A bandit was about to shoot her when Miss Aldrich forced a laugh. Nonplussed by her attitude, the bandit dropped his rifle and assisted Miss Aldrich to her feet.

Abandoned later on because of her exhausted condition, Miss Aldrich, bruised and blistered, made her way to a walled village. She failed to gain entrance, and circling the wall, came to a dog kennel. She routed the dog and crawled into the kennel, where she spent the night. The next day the villagers gave her food, and assisted her to a larger village, where clothing was obtained.

RECOGNITION OF MEXICO BY U. S. IN SIGHT

Washington, Aug. 21.—Immediate recognition of the Mexican government was recommended to President Coolidge by Commissioners Charles Beecher Warren and John Barton Payne.

Prior to going to the White House the Commissioners delivered their report to Secretary of State Hughes. That report consisted of a voluminous document containing the approved minutes of all meetings held by the Recognition Commissioners.

COOLIDGE PLEASED

After the two conferences it was said at the White House that President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes were highly gratified over the outcome of the negotiations.

Upon leaving the Secretary of State's office both Commissioners expressed their entire satisfaction with the result of their mission. Commissioner Warren said:

"The Mexican Government has expressed itself as satisfied with the result of the conference. We ourselves are satisfied, and we hope this government will be satisfied."

HUGHES SATISFIED.

Mr. Hughes, standing nearby nodded smiling approval of the Commissioner's words.

Asked the direct question whether his report to the President and Secretary of State recommends the recognition of President Obregon's Government, Mr. Warren replied:

"Well, that's what we went down there for." He added that the final decision as to the recognition must rest with President Coolidge.

WOMAN, 70, AGREES TO STOP RUM SELLING

Mrs. Ida Gordon of East Boston, seventy years old, was arrested on a default warrant issued by the Superior Court in a case where she had appealed from a fine of $50 imposed upon her by the East Boston Municipal Court for keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale. She was brought before Judge Keating and pleaded guilty. Agreeing to go out of that line of business, she was released on her own recognizance.

In One Woman's Head. The Stars in Their Courses. Kabala to Dressmaking.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Company.

MARVELOUS IS CALIFORNIA, her ocean biggest in the world, climate finest, clouds, sky, mountains, most beautiful. And the profits on real estate, wisely bought, beyond the dreams of avarice. And they have only just started.

BUT MOUNTAINS, sky and ocean are as nothing compared with the women. All the cataracts of all the mountains are feeble imitations of her power, when the woman of California concentrates on improving her brain.

TAKE FOR INSTANCE, Mrs. Omniscia Del, to whom Jack Chapman presents you in the Montmartre restaurant at Hollywood. Is her mind on the movie stars, male and female, that revolve, wiggle, hop, twist, writhe and roll their eyes on the dancing floor?

She does not look at them, but tells you, slowly, starting with the pickled shrimps, and winding up with the coffee, what "courses" she is taking and has taken.

She is taking a course in astrology now, but first she took a course in geology. Geology is necessary, it seems, if you want to make a success of astrology.

She was led to astrology by Rosicrucianism. She continues the course in Rosicrucianism and its philosophy with her other courses. "Rosicrucius was a German, you know, his real name was Rosenkrans, but I am sure we have all forgotten our anti-German war prejudice by now." Rosicrucius means 'rosy cross.' Pretty, isn't it?"

THE LADY of deep study hopes that her next baby will be fortunately born in an astrological way, with correct combination and conjunction of the stars. She is going to arrange that if she possibly can.

"You don't believe in astrology? Why, the great men in old times believed in it, and they knew more than we do," the lady proceeds like the stars in their courses.

"I took a course in the law of the Kabala. That's very mystic, you know. The Jews are really a very clever people when it comes to thinking. They are terribly interested in the Kabala after they began to get tired of their own religion. Well, of course, the Kabala is quite interesting. It was started, you know, by Pythagoras, but he wasn't a Jew; he was a Greek.

"Theosophy? Why, yes, of course. I have taken any number of courses in theosophy, and I couldn't begin to tell you how many Swamis I have listened to. In fact, I am writing a play about one of them now. But he falls in love with an American girl, and that takes a good deal of the esoteric simplicity and sweetness out of him.

"You have to study theosophy before you can study Rosicrucianism. Theosophy leads to Rosicrucius, you know."

"SOME OF THESE courses will seem to you, perhaps, unnecessary for a woman, especially as women are not supposed to know as much as you men know. But I want you to understand that I have taken a course in dressmaking, too.

"Then, of course, you want to protect yourself, and for that you need a course in elementals.

"Don't you even know what elementals are? Why, they are earthbound spirits. The air is charged with them, especially around slaughter houses, graveyards and cabarets. This room is just full of elementals now, but I know how to protect myself against them. You simply put your mind on higher things; that disgusts them and they never come near you."

WHILE YOU marvel at the intelligence of these elementals, realizing their limitations and keeping clear of the Kabala, Rosicrucius, Pythogoras and Madame Blavatsky, you learn that the California young woman produces and does not merely absorb.

She did take all those courses, but only to find out how foolish human beings can be and on what strange follies they waste their energies. Having taken all the courses, she is writing a play in which young people rebel against modern follies. Swami is cured of his Swami proclivities by falling in love with an American girl, and the young people rebelling against the "spiritual life" courses find that their very rebellion forces them into it.

THE PLAY is to be a success. Montague Glass says so, and he cares no more for Rosicrucius than Mr. Potash cares for Pericles. You should admire the wisdom of the young woman taking all "the courses" from dressmaking to "elementals." The more things you have studied, thoroughly or slightly, the more intelligently you can talk to your children when they grow up and ask you questions. And when you study you open new avenues into the brain. It is important to open many avenues before the brain gets "set" like concrete and allows nothing more to come in.

BY THE time you have reached the elementals you have left the Montmartre customers gliding and squirming far behind you, and are on the way to the Beach Club, "only thirteen to fourteen miles down that way." They think nothing in Los Angeles of going fifty miles to dinner. They say "we want to get used to it because when Los Angeles has ten million population, of course, we shall have to live rather far apart."

When you go to the Beach Club they show you casually a piece of ground that a friend bought a little while ago for six or seven hundred dollars and recently sold for four hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

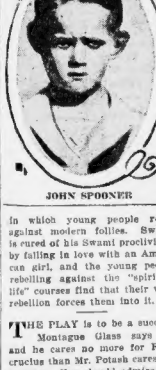
The truthful real estate stories of Los Angeles are calculated to make the New York or Chicago real estate dealers dizzy. But real estate, oceans and all are nothing compared with California women.

The lady mentioned, by the way, is really not named Omniscia Del. That's near enough to it. But she is not what you might suppose, a plain blue stocking from the East. She is a highly ornamental, willowy product of the Pacific Coast, where her mother and grandmother were born. Her general lines are those of Acacia of the West.

Young man, take a little money—that is necessary—and go to California if you want to find wonderful virtues in real estate, and still greater values in wives.

LANDLORDS BAR COUPLE WITH TOTS

ARTHUR SPOONER



JOHN SPOONER

Although mother says her children are well behaved, hard hearted landlords refuse to permit them to live in apartments.

A bride and groom stood at the threshold of a Brookline apartment. Beside them stood the landlord.

Said he: "Do you intend to have children?"

The bride blushed.

The groom stuttered amazed. Then he became angry. The landlord shrugged his shoulders. "I must know, because if you are planning to have children you can't have the apartment."

No wonder this advertisement appeared in a Boston newspaper Monday:

"WANTED — An apartment, small house or part of house, by a homeless couple who have committed the crime of having two children; must be in a good location, within commuting distance of the South Station; please state rent and improvements. A. E. Spooner, Scituate, Mass."

LANDLORDS BOLD.

A reporter for the American discovered in investigating rental conditions that landlords have grown supinely bold in the extent to which they have carried an independence made possible by the shortage of houses. Moreover visitors are frequently commenting upon the strange advertisements they see in Boston newspapers and no others, i. e.:

"TO RENT—Five-room apartment. Protestant adults only."

"To LET—Sunny house with improvements. No children. Christian Scientists only."

"FOR RENT — Apartment. Catholic couple preferred."

SPOONER'S EXPERIENCE.

As to renting just now. Here is the experience of Arthur E. Spooner and his wife, who advertised as above.

Spooner is employed at the assessors' office. Under the Civil Service ruling, he is forced to have his residence within city limits. In 1918, when Spooner was discharged by the government service, he and Mrs. Spooner and their two sons moved into an apartment on Linden street. For this home they paid $32 a month. They lived there until July of this year, when the property changed hands. Rent was advanced 28 per cent. The Spooners were forced to move. They rented a cottage situated on the beach at Scituate. They have since been engaged in a futile search for a home in Brookline.

When they applied to landlords or lodging one of two conditions they have found that the rent was beyond their means or children were "not desired."

In one instance they applied at an apartment house at No. 22-33 Brainard road. The building contains 21 apartments, only eight of which are occupied at present.

"Three rooms? That will be $68 a month," said the owner. "Moreover, we do not want children in our apartments."

At three other addresses they had the same experience. Now they have almost given up hope of obtaining a suitable home, and are advertising in the hope that something answering their needs may be brought to light.

OPERATORS TO MAKE OFFER

Compromise Figure That Will Halt Strike Is Reported as Parley Resumes

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 21. (I.N.S.)—With a strong belief prevailing conference circles that the operators "are about to offer something which will prevent a strike" representatives of the anthracite miners and operators today went into the second anthracite field before the present wage agreement expires August 31.

Samuel D. Warriner, chief spokesman for the coal operators, continued today to maintain the attitude that the anthracite industry cannot stand a wage increase, but despite his views the report was prevalent that the employers are prepared to suggest a compromise advances in wages.

It was expected, however, that the operators' offer would fall considerably below the 20 per cent. increase demanded by the miners.

Armed with documents and data to substantiate their claim that the mine workers are entitled to the 20 per cent. increase for contract miners and $2 a day for day workers, John B. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and other union officials were ready to fight out "demand No. 2" as they call it.

The check-off issue temporarily has been put in the background.

"Yesterday the operators gave us no encouragement in our wage demand," Lewis said. "And today we will continue to press for its settlement in order to take up the other demands that must be disposed of before an agreement is effected."

In support of the acceptance of the wage demand, Warriner and other operators representatives had amassed an array of figures to show that concession to the demand as presented by the miners would add $2 a ton to the cost of anthracite to the consumer and would represent a cost to the employers of $300,000,000.

The government is maintaining an interest interest in the negotiations. In addition to the daily report sent out to the United States Coal Commission, an agent of the department of justice is said to be watching the proceedings and making detailed reports.

LACK OF MATRON STIRS WALTHAM

Waltham citizens charge that the Mayor in neglecting to appoint a police matron, has failed to comply with the State laws.

Lack of a matron has been a controversy for years and was brought up again by the experience of Mrs. Delia Ripley of No. 66 Cambridge street, Boston.

Arrested after, it is alleged, she was brutally beaten by James Downey of No. 10 Winchester street, South End, Mrs. Ripley, was kept at the police station in a helpless condition for nine hours, unattended by a matron, until Capt. C. H. Fuller ordered her removed to the Waltham Hospital. She is still in a serious condition.

POLICEMAN FIRED ON NEGLECT CHARGE

Patrolman Thomas J. McGuire of the Mattapan police station was dismissed from the police department after a trial board convicted him on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and neglect of duty. The charges were brought against McGuire after, it was alleged, he neglected to ring in the police box signals for more than five hours one night.

AIR MAIL ACROSS U.S. STARTS

Planes Heavily Laden Start Simultaneously From New York and San Francisco

New York, Aug. 21.—(I.N.S.)—A new epoch in postal air service was marked today when two army mail-planes from opposite sides of the continent prepared to hop off to institute twenty-eight hour mail service between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

Under the new service a letter mailed from New York Tuesday morning would be delivered in San Francisco Wednesday evening.

Promptly at 11 o'clock one of the planes with 500 pounds of mail matter left New York, westward bound. Almost simultaneously another plane left San Francisco and the 28-hour coast-to-coast mail service was officially started.

To facilitate the handling and movement of the mail, the country has been divided into three zones, New York-Chicago; Chicago-Cheyenne and Cheyenne-San Francisco.

Basic rates are eight cents for the first zone, 16 cents second and 24 cents for the third. Stops will be made at six stations—Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne and Reno for mail delivery.

To insure the complete success of the service, forty-two landing fields and a number of relay stations have been designated at strategic places throughout the country. Extra planes will be held in readiness at main relay fields to take up the flight if the regular carriers are crippled.

Powerful beacon lights have been established at the landing fields to guide the pilots in the night flying.

CHILD INSTANTLY KILLED BY TRUCK

Palmer, Aug. 21—While playing in the street near the home three-year-old Michaldo Stachalta fell under the wheels of a passing truck, and was instantly killed. Apparently oblivious of the approaching vehicle, the child started across the street, hit the side of the heavy truck and rolled under the rear wheels. The driver said he did not see the accident at all.

LYNN GIRL LAUDED BY COURT AS SLEUTH

MISS GLADYS BROWN

Miss Gladys Brown of No. 1 Atlantic street, Lynn, was praised by Judge Reese in Lynn Court for her cleverness in assisting in the capture of Victor A. Vilches of New York, who is alleged to have swindled retail merchants in Lynn. Miss Brown testified that she suspected Vilches of shortchanging her brother in the store of Samuel Sons in Union street. She trailed him to other stores where he is alleged to have short changed merchants, and then called a policeman. Vilches was held in $1,500 for trial August 23.

BLOOD STAINS IN CANOE; FEAR MURDER

Worcester, Aug. 21. — Blood stains in a canoe are believed by the police to be evidence of the murder of a boy at Lake Quinsigamond.

Two boys, one about eighteen years old, the other, fourteen, rented a canoe at Lake Quinsigamond on Thursday evening. The younger boy left $2 in money and a watch as security for the canoe.

Later in the evening, the older boy returned the canoe. Asked where his companion was, he replied, "he's not coming back. I left him down there."

Employes of the boathouse suspected nothing until this morning, when they discovered a pool of blood in the bottom of the canoe the two boys had rented. They told the police, who have worked secretly on the case day and night, without obtaining any definite results.

Information obtained from the bureau of missing persons has shed no light on the affair. Police suspect the younger boy was murdered by his older companion, and the body disposed of somewhere in the vicinity of the lake. They have been unable to find any trace of the missing boy.

AUTOPSY SHOWS COP STANDING WHEN SHOT

Lawrence, Aug. 21.—Dr. Victor A. Reed, medical examiner, has submitted his report on the autopsy performed on the body of Police Officer Arthur J. Bower, who was shot to death on the Lowell road by unknown assassins. He declares that the officer was standing at the time the 38-calibre bullet entered his body. He believes that the murderer was on the officer's left side. The report disclosed that the bullet in the leg was fired while the victim lay upon the ground.

EMPLOYMENT FALLS SLIGHTLY IN JULY

Washington, Aug. 21.—A decrease of ¼ per cent. in the average number of employes in July as compared with June was shown in a report made public today by the Department of Labor giving preliminary figures for 6,739 representative establishments in 51 manufacturing industries. The employment decrease, was largely a seasonal one. It was the first decrease shown in the monthly surveys since April, 1922.

SIX INVITED TO SEE KILLING OF RELATIVE

Newnan, Ga., Aug. 21.—How six members of a family were called upon to witness the execution of their brother-in-law was revealed to the police here by John W. Minter, who confessed, the police said, that he shot Millard Trouton near here and then threw his body into a shallow creek.

Minter, head of a large family of boys and girls and having four sons-in-law, one of whom was Trouton, told that to avenge alleged mistreatment of his daughter, the wife of Trouton, and prevent him from making further overtures to get her to come back and live with him, he decided to "get rid of him."

COULDN'T FORGET IT.

"It preyed on my mind. I could not forget it," Minter is quoted by the police in his confession. He was referring, they said, to a whipping which Trouton gave his wife, causing her to leave him and return to her parents. Mrs. Trouton told her fathers, brothers and brothers-in-law of other mistreatment.

Then came a note to her from Trouton, Minter said, seeking a reconciliation. The father called his sons and sons-in-law into council and it was then decided, that to prevent any chance of Mrs. Trouton leaving the Minter home again to live with her husband, they would kidnap him and get him out of the way.

The father takes all the blame for the killing, the police said. His sons, John Jeff, Benjamin and his son-in-law, L. L. Gaodrum, B. F. Weldon and Claude Washington and a friend, W. M. Feltman, are implicated in the plot. Ben Freeman, also being held, was not implicated in the confession.

MORE CONFESSIONS.

The police announced today that other members of the family had confessed.

After having enlisted the aid of Feltman to get Trouton to "take a walk," the Minters kidnaped him, taking him in an automobile to a nearby woods.

The police are still withholding what took place in the woods, as related to them by the elder Minter, other than to say Minter admitted having fired five shots into Trouton's body.

Trouton's body was found floating in the shallow stream about nine miles below the place where the alleged killing took place. His arms and legs were tied. Examination of the body, according to the police, revealed that the skull had been crushed.

NEW ANGLE IN TRAGEDY REVEALED

Troopers Who Found Haverhill Victim's Body Declare He Was "Laid Out"

New York, Aug. 21.—Minutes of the Grand Jury that indicted Walter S. Ward, wealthy baker's son, for the murder of Clarence E. Peters, Haverhill, Mass. ex-sailor, on a lonely road near White Plains more than a year ago, were turned over to Ward's attorneys.

It ended a court battle of several weeks between Ward's attorneys and the State as to whether they should be surrendered.

The record of the Grand Jury testimony showed that witnesses including State troopers, who saw the body on the morning it was found, believed Peters had been killed at some place other than the spot on the lonely Kensico road at which the body was found.

These witnesses emphasized the fact that the body appeared to have been "laid out" and that Peters' vest showed no bullet marks and that there were no signs of a struggle. Ward had said he shot Peters during a fierce struggle for the possession of Peter's pistol.

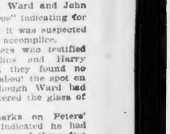
The minutes also brought out a new angle in the case in that the proceedings were entitled "The People of the State of New York against Walter S. Ward and John Doe," the "John Doe" indicating for the first time that it was suspected that Ward had an accomplice.

The State troopers who testified were Ralph Collins and Harry Green. Both said they found no splinters of glass about the spot on Kensico road, although Ward had said a bullet shattered the glass of his windshield.

The powder marks on Peters' shirt, they said, indicated he had been shot at a range of three feet or the farthest. They said they found only one tire track, disputing Ward's story that he had driven to the spot where his car was, the alleged blackmailers were in another machine.

HULL BENEFIT FOR CRIPPLED YOUTH

On July 3, this year, Donald McNeil, 8 years old, son of a widow, sustained the loss of his right arm while working at Paragon Park. He had planned to work his way through college with the aid of his athletic ability that had made him a leader among the boys in Hull. He will receive the education to which he had aspired if the residents of Hull can furnish it.



Mrs. Anselm L. Beal.

On Wednesday, Aug. 22, a benefit concert will be held in the Nantasket Town Hall. Mrs. Anselm L. Beal is the leader in the movement to aid Donald.

TSEKOS SMILES AS HE FACES JUDGE

Franklin, N. H., Aug. 21.—Wearing a smile Nunie G. Tsekos was brought here handcuffed to Sheriff Wooster and City Marshal Manchester. A crowd of nearly 1,000 persons gathered in City Hall, where the police courtroom is. Attorney McClallum entered a plea of not guilty to charges of murder for his client and waived examination. Tsekos was charged with murder of his wife, Niiall Tsekos, and her mother, Catherine Adams. Judge Clifford ordered him committed to Concord Jail without bail to await the October term of the Merrimack County Superior Court. The sheriff and city marshal took Tsekos to Concord Jail by auto, accompanied by Attorney General Hinkley and County Solicitor Bainis. The big crowd made no demonstration here.

RAID REVEALS PIER GAMING REVELS

HUGE SUMS LOST BY VICTIMS

Wealthy Women Patrons of Gilded Dens of Vice at Society Resort

Narragansett Pier, Aug. 21—Startling disclosures as to all-night gambling revels and staggering losses over the green tables and at rouge et noir, faro and the like are believed impending here, following two raids on alleged gambling palaces, led by High Sheriff John R. Wilcox.

Fears that some of the wealthy and gambling-mad society women as well as men will pack their belabelled trunks and hie away are causing Acting Attorney-General Luigi De Pasquale to shroud in secrecy his efforts to get these men, and particularly women, into court as witnesses against John C. Joyce, arrested following the raids.

RAID TIPPED OFF.

Meanwhile Narragansett Pier is seething with rumors and counter rumors and the outcome of the raids is the topic of speculation.

"I hope to get some of those people for witnesses when the case comes up for trial," said Mr. Pasquale today.

The trial of Joyce was continued to August 31 in district court at Wakefield upon motion of the acting attorney general. It is alleged that Joyce is interested in Elm Cottage and the Narragansett Club, in the Clark block, the two places raided.

Absence of the members of the gilded clique which he believes nightly infested the places, when the raid was made, is laid by Acting Attorney General Pasquale to a tip he claims reached the places six or seven hours ahead of the raids and four hours after the search warrants were in the hands of High Sheriff Wilcox.

"The tip, if there was any, couldn't have come through my department because I was the only man in it who knew of the warrants until just before the raid," countered Sheriff Wilcox, when informed of Mr. Pasquale's statement.

Rumors are rife in this and surrounding towns that politics is playing its part in the little gambling drama now unfolding.

Joyce, out on $1,000 bail, refuses to discuss the case.

Acting Attorney-General Pasquale asserts that he has received information against alleged gambling places at the Pier, giving the layout in detail. One of them is described as being on a second floor, fitted up luxuriously and only frequented by millionaires, so high is the play and so exclusive the society.

On this floor, information has it, are two roulette wheels with boards at either side, with dollar chips the lowest limit. Here lay-outs, a private room for stiff crap games and several extra chairs, figure, it is claimed. Magnificently furnished lounging rooms, cloak rooms, smoking rooms for both women and men and other conveniences are listed.

WOMEN PATRONS.

It is claimed by those who have furnished information to Mr. Pasquale that two-thirds of the patrons are women.

It is known that on the night of the raid and after it had been pulled off, one or more parties, including women, tried to get in, not knowing what had happened. They were seen by a witness.

Chief of Police Frank Smith of this place, asked by an American representative as to what he knew of gambling, replied:

"I know there were no complaints. Had there been I should have acted upon them. The sheriff took things into his own hands without consulting me."

Talks with business men in the alleged gambling section brings information that gambling has been no secret.

GIRL LOSES ARM, BOY DYING; HIT BY AUTOS

Fitchburg, Aug. 21.—Two children injured in automobile accidents are dying at the Burbank Hospital. The operator of one of the automobiles which struck a child was arrested charged with reckless driving. Helen Dizzell, ten years old, of No. 11 Kingman street, Lunenberg, had her left arm amputated at the hospital after she was struck by an automobile operated by William Held, nineteen years old, of Clinton, at Baker Station, Lunenberg. Veda Fava, twelve years old, of No. 25 Rockland street, suffered a compound fracture of the skull when he was struck by an automobile operated by James A. Austin of No. 936 Main street, North Leominster, on Franklin road.

BOYS TORTURED 18 DISAPPEAR STRANGELY

Chicago, Aug. 21—Eighteen boys have mysteriously disappeared from the Chicago Parental School, according to charges made during an investigation of the conduct of the school.

The investigation was held in Criminal Court before Chief Justice Michael J. McKinley. It was launched after James Wright, a fourteen-year-old inmate, was found hanging in a cell. Whether the boy committed suicide or was killed and strung up is to be determined by the court.

The information that eighteen boys have mysteriously disappeared from the school was given by Alderman Bowler, who brought about the inquiry after the Welchy boy was found dead.

BOARD JURISDICTION

The school is under jurisdiction of the Chicago Board of Education. It is maintained as a place of punishment for boys, between the ages of ten and sixteen, who violate rules of the public schools.

Allen M. Kline, an instructor, testified that crazy shouts being heard in the night often awakened him. One boy had been so badly beaten, Kline said, he was unable to recognize him.

Raimond Stefano, a ten-year-old boy, testified he had been beaten by Timothy Shea, guard.

LIMIT TWENTY-FOUR LASHES.

As in the Florida convict camps, the limit was twenty-four lashes. According to Frank Prusik, Frank is a timid little fellow of fourteen years.

Kline, the instructor, described punishment known as "muscle grinding" and "duckings." In the grind the muscles are forced until the limbs are numb. The ducking, according to Kline, consisted of putting a boy's head under water "until the bubbles come."

MATTAPAN COP IS DROPPED AT RETRIAL

Patrolman Thomas J. McGaloe of the Mattapan station, found guilty by a trial-board of three officers of conduct unbecoming an officer, has been dismissed from the Police Department by Commissioner Wilson after a rehearing of his case.

The charges against the officer were based on his failure to pull his duty calls for several hours in one evening.

TOURISTS' AUTO PLUNGES DOWN CLIFF; 6 DEAD

The Rev. Dr. H. Grant Person, pastor of the Eliot Congregational Church, Hyde street, Newton, and his wife, Mrs. Georgia H. Person, were killed near Nice, France, when a sight-seeing motor bus went over an embankment on the Nice-Evian road, according to a cable despatch received by his friends in Newton today.

Robert Person, seventeen years old, and Carleton, twenty-one years old, sons of Dr. Person, are reported to be seriously injured. Robert was graduated from Newton High School in June. Carleton is a student at Northwestern University. Four others were killed, and fifteen were injured, according to the despatches.

The party was arranged by a Boston agency.

The accident was caused by defective brakes which failed to work as the bus was speeding down a steep hill. The car turned a complete somersault as it went over the precipice. Most of those killed were crushed beneath the wrecked machine.

4 OTHERS DEAD.

The other persons killed were Charles H. Gray of Gardiner, Me., Mrs. Alexander Sondheimer of St. Louis, Mrs. D. S. Whitwell, also on American, and Louis Vallerino, driver of the bus.

The injured included: Alexander Sondheimer, Isaac Strayhorn, Mrs. Isaac Strayhorn, Professor Russell H. Miller, in charge of the party, Mrs. W. A. Hooker, Miss W. H. Beaumont, W. R. Coffey, Mrs. W. R. Coffey, Mrs. W. W. Spaid, Washington, D. C., F. W. Rigg, official photographer of the party, Rene Moreau, of Brussells, and Jean Paul, of Nice.

Mrs. Meta Mooney was the only member of the party who escaped unharmed.

FELL 300 FEET.

The motor bus left the road while descending a steep hill, plunged through a parapet, and fell 300 feet to the Var River. Mr. Lachenet, manager of the Transatlantic Company, and Mr. Flint, both of New York, following in another car with other persons, sent to Nice for ambulances, and climbed down the embankment to give aid to the injured persons.

Vallerino was still alive when the New York men reached him, but was unable to tell what had happened to cause the car to go over the embankment.

Dr. Person and his family were enabled to make the tour of Europe through an Easter present given by Mrs. Frank A. Day of Newton, widow of the former partner in the Boston banking firm of R. L. Day & Company. They had completed a tour of Western Europe, and were due at Nice and the Riviera before returning to the United States.

Within an hour after the accident all the able-bodied population of Guillaumes, men, women and children to the number of several hundred, were engaged in the work of relief and had succeeded in bringing all the wounded up to the road.

The two sons of Rev. and Mrs. Person insisted that the other persons among the wounded be attended to first, despite the painful nature of their own injuries.

Mrs. Sondheimer and Mrs. White were so seriously injured that they were left in the hospital at Puget-Theniers, where they died shortly afterward. The others were taken to Nice.

CHILDREN SAY PRAYERS.

The bodies of the dead reached Nice at 1 o'clock this morning and were placed in the special room in the railroad station which, during the war, was reserved for the bodies of dead soldiers brought back from the front.

First aid was given the injured by Dr. Agnely of Guillaumes in the ballroom of the Hotel Olivier. While awaiting removal to Nice, the bodies of the dead were taken to the little village church.

The parish priest ordered candles placed by each body and a group of school children recited prayers until ambulances from Nice arrived.

Dr. Person Was Newton Pastor 16 Years

Rev. H. Grant Person was installed as pastor of the Eliot Congregational Church, Newton, in January, 1907. He came to the Eliot church from the First Presbyterian Church of Seneca Falls, N. Y. He was born in Saratoga County, N. Y., September 18, 1866, of New England stock. He prepared for college at Poultney Academy, Poultney, Vt., was graduated from Williams College in 1891 and from Auburn Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y.

In 1896 he was married to Miss Georgia H. Ferry of Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Person left for Europe the latter part of June, with their two sons, Carleton G., 22 and Robert T., 17. They went with a party of about 25, on a personally conducted tour which was to bring them back Sept. 8. The tour was managed by the Temple Tours of Boston.

JOHNSON WON'T SEEK PRESIDENCY

San Francisco, Aug. 21.—In an editorial the San Francisco Bulletin quotes what purports to be a letter written by Senator Hiram Johnson some time prior to June 11 to Charles K. McClatchey of Sacramento. Senator Johnson is alleged to have said:

"I feel that Harding will be able to renominate himself, although some very good people, like Senator Moses and George Henry Payne, believe otherwise and want to commence an active campaign. As I have said to you often, I would like to be President.

"I think any American in politics or civil life who pretends otherwise is wholly hypocritical. I realize, however, political realities, and I cannot see success in an active candidacy."

ENTIRE CITY IN HUNT FOR BABY KIDNAPED

By Universal Service.

New York, Aug. 21.—"Won't you ask people to look out for a strange baby's cry? I know my baby is crying. I hear her cry all the time. Don't you know anyone can recognize a strange baby's cry?"

A dozen reporters, men and women, heard that plea of a distracted mother when they visited the humble apartment of Mrs. Ella McKenzie, whose six-months-old, sickly baby was kidnaped Saturday.

The mother clung to a scapular, emblem of hope, suspended around her neck, as she pleaded with the writers to aid her, then fell weeping beside the crib clutching at the little bedclothing.

UNCLE ONCE KIDNAPED.

And Mrs. Clara Croker, godmother of Mrs. McKenzie, tried to soothe her, reminding her that her uncle, Jos Rausch, had been kidnaped from the same neighborhood thirty-one years before, but had been brought back.

"You remember, Ella," she said, "your Uncle Joe was taken away, but the fireman who took him brought him back when he read in the papers about how Joe's mother took it."

Not since Charlie Ross was stolen years ago, has the disappearance of a baby been so widely discussed. Every New York newspaper, in whatever language, printed the recipe for the special diet upon which the baby was being fed when it was taken from its carriage in front of a five and ten cent store.

Some of the papers featured the diet in large type in the hope that the kidnapers will use the proper food and the child will be kept alive.

One paper offered $1,000 reward for information leading to the discovery of the child.

The baby has been prematurely and has been sickly always, the special diet having been ordered shortly after its birth. To the natural anguish that any mother would have for her stolen baby, is added the fear of Mrs. McKenzie that the baby will die for lack of the proper food.

POLICE COMB CITY.

The police are combing the city in a search for the baby. Fifty additional police were detailed to the case and more than 100 more are searching rooming houses in the neighborhood of the McKenzie home on West Twelfth street.

The police now have abandoned the theory that revenge or hope of a reward inspired the kidnaping and are concentrating on the belief that a childless woman, driven to the act by a mother yearning amounting to a dementia, has taken the baby.

"What would anybody want with her," cried Mrs. McKenzie. "They were always finer babies wherever I took her. She was thin, and her face was as white as snow."

'BRICK BOTTOM' FREE OF RUM, SAYS HARRIS

At a meeting held in the Clark Bennett School on Poplar street, Somerville, Alderman Robert C. Harris of that city explaining the reasons for demanding a change in the liquor squad, said "that he wanted the deplorable conditions caused by the nefarious bootlegging traffic in Somerville cleaned up," and added, his remarks had no connection with the "Brickbottom section" of the city.

He said that he himself had formerly resided for many years in that section of the city and knew the residents to be eminently respectable people.

Alderman Harris emphatically denied having referred to the "Brick bottom" section, but did mention by name several streets in the so-called "Slaughter House" district on the Somerville-Cambridge border line, where he charged moonshine could be purchased and where he saw huge and gaudy limousines, with no license in Somerville.

Since the change in the liquor squad last Thursday, the new squad headed by Sergeant Graves conducted four successful raids on South, Ward and Bedford streets, in the section named by Alderman Harris.

LONDON GOES WILD OVER DAVIES FILM

By JOHN T. BURKE
Universal Service Cable

London, August 21—Applause, laughter and cheers greeted the triumphant premiere of "Little Old New York," at the Empire Theatre.

All three emotions were in sincere tribute to the wonderful artistry of Marion Davies, who, according to Viscount Astor who, with his son, daughter and sister, formed one of the many brilliant box parties, was marvelous in the loving, appealing character of Patricia, later becoming Pat O'Day to save the family fortune.

LORD ASTOR THRILLED.

Lord Astor added:

"I was thrilled from start to finish. Naturally I was interested in the presentation of the character of my great grandfather, which was finely interpreted and by the wonderful scenes connected with the launching of Robert Fulton's Clermont.

"Films like 'Little Old New York,' of the pure type which are really educational, should be warmly welcomed in England."

The enthusiastic verdict of Lord Astor voiced the opinion of the distinguished audience which filled every seat of the big theatre. The consensus of experts is that Miss Davies, in "Little Old New York" has achieved the most wonderful success of her career, and that as a film it is one that reaches the hearts of womankind.

SINGING DUET A HIT.

The scene in which Patricia engages in a singing duel with Ariana, brought down the house. The plaintive little Irish melody and "Home, Sweet Home," as sung by the artists behind the screen, synchronizing effectively.

Captain Frank Scovell, aide de camp to the Prince of Wales, said: "'Little Old New York' has a stronger appeal to me than even 'Enemies of Women.' I think Marion Davies, who was splendid in 'When Knighthood was in Flower,' has achieved here the greatest triumph of her career."

HOLYOKE MILLS TO REOPEN WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Reggy Foster Prominent on the North Shore, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. REGGY FOSTER—with her gold-red hair and sprightly toes—occupies quite an important place in our "Who's News Along the North Shore"—and why?

This Summer the Fosters and their youthful heir have been staying with Mr. Foster's parents, the Charles H. W. Fosters, at Marblehead Neck. Their place is right opposite the Eastern Yacht Club, which doesn't seem at all strange, as Charles Foster is one of the keenest yachtsmen along the shore.

Mrs. Foster was formerly Frances Hoar, and she and her sister, Louisa, who became Mrs. Christopher G. LaFarge last June, have enlivened many a notable charity function with their terpsichorean intricacies.

Both the sisters made their debut in Boston, a very fortunate thing for the Vincent Club, which wasn't at all slow to realize that "drawing cards" these two artists were. However, as the daughters of the late Rockwood Hoar, who served for many years as Congressman from Massachusetts, the two girls spent much of their time at the capital. Later on, when their mother became Mrs. Frederick Gillett, wife of the Speaker, they continued their close association with Washington. Both Frances and Louisa Hoar were married at the capital, though each had spent much time in travel and visiting friends in Boston and New York.

Mrs. Foster, besides being a lovely dancer, is a clever designer of costumes. She and Miss Katherine Abbott designed the costumes for "Rush and Wrangle," given in April by the Vincent Club. When an enterprising group of society folk presented "Why Not?" two Winters ago for the Infants' Hospital, it was Mrs. Foster who fashioned the smart costumes.

As we have said before, the one-time Frances Hoar has red-gold hair. Besides which she is slender and petite and has smiling blue eyes. In the Winter time the Fosters make their home on Beacon Hill.

MRS. REGINALD C. FOSTER

Mrs. Foster is (Frances Hoar). Nimble toes and cleverness at theatricals entitles her to a prominent place in our "Who's News Along the North Shore."

I EXPECT that a goodly number of the North Shore cottagers will wield their racquets in the tournament which opens at the Essex County Club on Saturday. The matches include ladies singles and mixed doubles, entries for which must be in by tomorrow.

JOINING what promises to be a long procession of Fall brides will be Miss Agnes Means, whose marriage to Lieutenant John Beresford Wynn Waller, U. S. N., is scheduled to take place on September 22 at St. John's Church, Beverly Farms. Miss Means is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Means of Manchester-by-the-Sea, her fiance being the son of Major-General Littleton W. H. Waller of the United States Marine Corps and Mrs. Waller of Philadelphia.

"SUNSET ROCK," Pride's Crossing, is once more a "full house." Stately Mrs. Parsons King has returned from her European travels, while her brother, John T. S. Spaulding, is home on a fishing trip to Canada. Mrs. King's son and daughter-in-law, the Henry P. Kings, are also at "Sunset Rock" with their young son.

SCANLAN SEEN IN IRISH PLAY AT PLYMOUTH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IF IT'S take a solemn view of a rollicking comedy and utter a fervent prayer that some day Walter Scanlan may have an Irish play worthy of his talents—his talents as a singing comedian.

In "The Blarney Stone" at the Plymouth last evening he frolicked about in old fashioned stuff, dished up to look like something fresh from the crop of 1923, but it proved to be an illusion and was saved from bitter consequences only by the fair voice of its principal participant and his great willingness to sing.

VOICE IS SILVERY

Whether you like the Irish drama of popular proletarian model is a matter of no dismay if you are privileged to hear Scanlan turn out good songs in the style in which he seems to be a master. In the current Irish drama nothing is more important than a silvery voice and fair material upon which to operate, and in this respect Mr. Scanlan had much the best of last evening's performance.

Two of his numbers were especially effective, and he is given credit by a generous manager for having composed both of them. Long after "The Blarney Stone" is on its conquering way in other communities heavily settled with ardent admirers of things that are Celtic, "A Bit o' Pink and White" and "Kitty" will be conspicuous numbers at Sunday afternoon vocal hours. Each of them are gems of light textured composition, with just enough of good Irish color to make them well worth trying for a second time.

OLD STYLE PLAY

While Mr. Scanlan is not particularly favored in his play, the song numbers carried him through to a very successful evening if you can believe what you hear in a theatre crowded with loyal descendants of kings and lesser lights from the much loved Emerald Isle. Personally Mr. Scanlan was a success—a melodious success.

In "The Blarney Stone" he had a play by Edward E. Rose that might have been lifted bodily out of the past and dressed up in a new suit of clothes for the occasion. You were spared the debt ridden tenant who couldn't pay his "rint" and the cruel English landlord was somehow or other overlooked, but you did have an impecunious minstrel who tried to write opera and in the place of the black hearted landlord you had more than fleeting glimpses of a modern Irish bill collector flitting about on a bicycle. Merely old friends in modern settings.

GENIAL TOUCH.

But there was a genial touch of Irish color to the piece—color that was heightened by Mr. Scanlan's fine singing voice and the excellence of his numbers. There was music, too, in the brogue tinged voices of the players, although it is not clear why the American characters in the play—many years out of the old country—should bring back to it a richer brogue than the natives could deliver. That is one of the vagaries of the drama.

Mr. Scanlan gave a capital performance—light hearted, humorous and agreeable. His principal support was in the hands of Pat Rafferty, Emerin Campbell, Margaret MacArthur and Helen Smith—all of them Irish to the core, and proud of it.

BIT OF BLARNEY FOR A PRETTY COLLEEN

MIDGETS HOLD SPOTLIGHT AT KEITH'S

Inasmuch as none of us ever really grow up, all of us will find at the show at Keith's this week in one that is bound to make a hit.

Singer's Midgets hold the headline spot, and it's almost a show in itself, with twelve scenes, twenty tiny men and women, wrestlers, boxers, conjurers, cowboys, models, hunters, a jazz band, singers and comedians, to say nothing of midget elephants, ponies and dogs.

The feature of this not this year is a scene called "The Lilliputians and Old King Tut."

You'll enjoy it very much, no matter how old you are.

In addition there are Billy Glason, monologist; Spencer and Williams, in "Putting It Over"; Fritz and Lucy Bruch, Eve Lynn and Clyde Dilson in "The Awkward Age"; Feldkin Jr. and Rhoda, and Dezso Retter.

CASINO OPENS WITH "BATHING BEAUTIES"

"Bathing Beauties," with Aaron and Kelly, colored strutting marvels, as an added attraction, opened the season at Waldron's Casino yesterday afternoon with a whirl of fun, music, dancing and pretty girls.

The production, one of the most elaborate burlesques ever seen here, was particularly appropriate to this beach season as a gay and lively chorus of eighteen girls displayed the latest creations in seaside wearing apparel.

In line with the regular Casino policy a continuous performance is in force. Motion pictures and high class vaudeville are given in addition to the big burlesque show.

POPULAR NOVEL IN PICTURE AT STATE

"The Eternal Struggle," an adaptation from the popular novel "The Law Bringers," with Earle Williams and a remarkable cast, was shown yesterday at Loew's State Theatre. The story is laid in the Canadian Northwest in pioneer days and gives marked opportunity for dramatic action. The companion feature was Hoot Gibson in "Blinky," a picturization of Gene Markey's widely read story of army life. A news reel was also shown.

COOLIDGES BUY THEIR CLOTHES IN HOME TOWN

Washington, Aug. 21.—There's a little French woman—Mrs. Girard—in Northampton, Mass., who makes clothes for the first lady of the land. There's a humble tailor shop not far from Mrs. Girard's where the President buys his suits.

Down the street are the Mahoney sisters, and there, the First Lady selects her hats.

"Trade at home" sounds the Coolidges, "if you don't buy in your town, and I don't buy in my town, what's going to become of our town?"

So Mrs. Coolidge is wearing a Girard gown and Mahoney hat all over Washington. Now most women would believe that fortunately dresses and hats were requisites of a President's wife. But not Mrs. Coolidge. Northampton style is good enough for her.

So far as can be ascertained, she has but one trunk. Other women in her position would have a dozen. She has written Mrs. Girard ordering a dress, and to the Mahoney sisters, requesting a hat to match.

Taking stock of her wardrobe, the First Lady decided she had quite enough of Summer things.

"I'll wait," she said, "until Fall. Then I'll go shopping in New York."

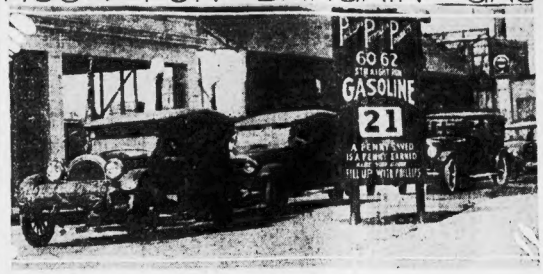
Word spread abroad, and Mrs. Coolidge is swamped with letters and advertisements. She has her list compiled and is ready to invade New York with her share of the Presidential salary. Then she will go to Boston and patronize, most likely, the store operated by Frank W. Stearns, the man who "discovered" her husband.

Until such time as the mourning period ends, the First Lady will dress very simply, and mostly in black. But when the social season gets under way in December, she will blossom forth.

There will be all kinds of frocks and wraps and suits in Mrs. Coolidge's White House wardrobe—but only one kind of shoes—broad-heeled and broad-toed, for the First Lady likes to walk and takes most of her exercise that way.

Will her taste in her shoes be reflected in the style shoes? Will there be such things as "Calvin heels" and "Coolidge lasts"? It is altogether probable.

RUSH FOR BARGAIN 'GAS'



PHILLIPS STATION, ROXBURY CROSSING
"Short profits and quick turnover" enables this concern to undersell its large competitors

21-CENT 'GAS' IN ROXBURY DRAWS MOTOR CROWDS

Gasoline at under a quarter a gallon.

This is the cry which draws the crowds of motorists to the Phillips filling station at Roxbury Crossing. From early morning until late at night the steady stream of automobiles winds through the gravel path, stopping to fill, then driving on.

"Short profits and quick turnover" is the secret of the station's success. The gasoline sold by the Phillips station may be worth as anywhere else 24½ cents a gallon. Yet the owner prospers by selling his product at a profit of 21 cents.

Throughout this city, the various stations selling their gasoline for 22 cents, Second, Jersey and other brands, are unfriendly.

The Phillips filling station, carrying the product of the New England Oil Refining Company at the same price, undersells their competitors and thrives in the process.

POSSE HUNTING ASSAILANT OF GIRL

Fall River, Aug. 21.—A young man, believed to be a foreigner, brutally attacked Mary Winer, thirteen years old, of No. 1126 Bedford street, as she was picking berries with two other girls in woods near the southeastern section of the city, and made his escape when his victim's screams attracted her companions to the scene.

Enraged at the girls' outcries, her assailant slashed Mary across the eye with a knife.

An armed posse of police and citizens is hunting the woods near the city and by Tiverton, R. I., for the assailant.

The White girl, her sister, Anna, and another girl became alarmed when they first realized that a stranger was following them, but he disappeared, and they became separated in their quest for berries.

The stranger suddenly leaped from behind bushes and, Mary says, drew a knife, threatening to kill her if she made an outcry.

The child screamed and the man clutched her. They struggled on the ground until she fastened her teeth into his hand. He wrenched his hand away and struck her in the face with his fist. Then Mary's cries reached the ears of Thomas Waring at No. 560 Dickson street, nearby, and treated by Police Surgeon Merritt.

SCARE THIEVES FROM HOME OF JUDGE COX

Lawrence, Aug. 21.—Burglars who entered the home of Judge Louis B. Cox, No. 7 Lowell street, were frightened by an alarm sent out by neighbors, who saw lights burning in the house and telephoned the police. The Cox family was away. A squad of officers in the patrol arrived a moment too late to catch the thieves in the act.

3 BOYS INJURED IN BICYCLE ACCIDENTS

Three boys were injured in bicycle accidents in Boston. All are at the City Hospital. Saul Rothenberg, 17 years old, of No. 124 Union Park street, South End, was knocked down by an automobile driven by a woman who disappeared without giving her name and address. Witnesses, however, got the number of the auto and police are tracing its owner. Daniel Shea, 4 years old, of No. 1434 Washington street, South End, attempted to climb on a motor cycle standing in front of his home. It tipped over and pinned the boy underneath. While riding on a bicycle Nicholas Adams, 11 years old, of No. 15 Chichester street, Neponset, lost his balance and fell off, breaking his arm.

Sees Extermination of Game Unless Laws Change

Washington, Aug. 21.—Dr. William T. Hornaday, naturalist and director of the New York Zoological Garden, writing in the current number of Nature, attacks the automobile and the automatic shotgun as destroyers of wild life, which threaten their extinction, and recommends a reduction of 50 per cent in all bag limits and the length of all open seasons.

Hunting by automobile, rapidly on the increase, Dr. Hornaday says, enables a shooting party to cover more ground than could be covered by a hunter afoot or horseback.

Added to that, he says, the modern rifle kills big game at a quarter of a mile or more, and the automatic shotgun sprays pellets of lead "like water from a hose sprinkler." He recommends reducing the capacity of automatic and pump shotguns to two shots.

BOSTON SHORT 500,000 TONS OF COAL

Boston faced a coal shortage today of half a million tons, also the prospects of coal being increased in price $2 per ton. In every city in New England there is less than one day's full supply.

From Atlantic City, where mine and operators are attempting to bridge the difficulties which has pointed toward a strike in the hard coal fields, came word that if mines were given a wage advance and assured certain they would insist upon the price of coal will be jumped $2 today $2 per ton.

"That Boston faces a shortage 500,000 tons of hard coal this Winter was made known at the meeting of the Mayor's club at the Parker House. Mayor Curley said he was taking steps to meet through use of Welch coal and fuel oil.

WANTS TO HELP OTHER WOMEN

Grateful for Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I am willing to write to any girl or woman who is suffering from the troubles I had before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back always ached, so I could not go about my housework, and I had other troubles from weakness. I was this way for years, then my sister-in-law took the Vegetable Compound and recommended it to me. In the time I have been taking it, it has done wonders for me. I keep house and am able to do lots of work besides."—Mrs. HELEN SEVCIK, 2711 Thomas St., Chicago, Ill.

Women suffering from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, pains, bearing-down feelings and weakness should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Not only is the worth of this splendid medicine shown by such cases as this, but for nearly fifty years this same sort of experience has been reported by thousands of women.

Mrs. Sevcik is willing to write to any girl or woman suffering from such troubles, and answer any questions they may like to ask.

100° in the Shade or 10° below Zero!

One hundred degrees in the shade or ten below zero, meat deliveries to your retailer go steadily on, so that you may be assured of just the kind and quality of meat that you desire.

No city is so far removed from live stock production that it cannot receive its regular supply of fresh meats.

Compare this with the meat supply of thirty or forty years ago. Summer weather then meant salt or pickled meats in the country, and a limited variety of fresh meats in most cities.

Refrigeration, developed by scientists, has made it possible for Swift & Company, and other packers, to prepare fresh meats and ship them long distances in refrigerator cars, so that today, without regard to heat or cold, meat reaches your dealer fresh, clean, and wholesome.

In addition to the fresh meats thus available, Swift & Company prepares a variety of tempting meats for hot weather:

Swift's Premium Frankfurts, from our modern sanitary kitchens, offer a choice blending of meats and spices.

Swift's Sausage Specialties and Swift's Dry Sausage, ready to serve, help lighten the housewife's summer task.

In addition to these, a score of other Summer Specialties are made available by Swift & Company's research and development work.

Our profit from all sources averages only a fraction of a cent a pound.

Is It Any Wonder that Millions of Mothers Rely on Lifebuoy?

Kiddies can't help getting dirty—even dangerously dirty. Chubby knees and hands are always being scratched and bruised. Grime is literally ground into tender skin.

And it isn't just honest soil. Curious little hands touch everything and whatever is handled by many people is almost certain to be a spreader of contagion.

Germs Collect on Hands

Most diseases which attack children are caused by germs which find lodgment on the hands and are carried to mouth, nose or food.

Mothers the world over have an abiding faith in the protection of Lifebuoy's wonderful antiseptic lather.

No matter how dirty the kiddies get, Mothers know that the danger is past when the rosy bodies are covered with this creamy, health-guarding lather which penetrates deep down into every pore, removing all impurities and leaving the skin refreshed, sweet and purified.

And how soothing Lifebuoy is to the most delicate skin—how beautifying!

Its rich oils of palm fruit and cocoanut are the most healthful fats employed in soap-making—the kindliest to the skin.

You know Lifebuoy is a true health soap the instant you smell it. It has a wholesome, cleanly, antiseptic odor, pungent while the health ingredient is being released in the lather but disappearing almost immediately. After using Lifebuoy there is no odor on the skin—neither a soap odor nor a skin odor. Lifebuoy is a perfect deodorizer.

Purify Hands Frequently

The cost of Lifebuoy is low, yet no better, purer soap was ever made. Other soaps do not possess its health protective value. In order that everyone in the family may use it constantly place a cake at every place where there is running water.

WIFE HAS NO PITY FOR DUPES OF McGEE

LOUISE GROODY McGEE

By Universal Service

New York, Aug. 20.—The investors who lost millions of dollars in the collapse of the bucketshop firm of E. M. Fuller & Co., would get little sympathy from Louise Groody, actress wife of W. Frank McGee, one of the partners of the firm now in jail as a result of the smash.

"Those who can't afford to lose money shouldn't invest money in Wall Street," Louise declared today in an interview, in which she said she had lost $50,000 of her money trying to help out her husband after the firm began to wobble.

"It's a gamble, isn't it," she asked. "The only way to gamble in stocks or real estate, or anything, is to say, if I lost the money, all right."

Both Miss Groody and Florence Ely Fuller, wife of Edward M. Fuller, the other jailed partner of the bankrupt brokerage firm, denied vigorously that they have been living in the lap of luxury on money taken in by their husbands in their shady stock-jobbing game.

PHONE COMPANY BARS 2,500 STRIKERS

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

Wins $20,000 for 30 Years' Devotion

2,500 PHONE WORKERS BANNED

Notified by Company Officials That Their Places Have Been Filled

Fully 2,500 former Boston telephone operators, who took part in the recent telephone strike, have been notified that they will not be re-employed by the New England Telephone Company.

According to the former operators, Eugene McGlaughlin, assistant traffic manager of the company, has been notifying former operators by telephone during the past two weeks that their careers as telephone operators are at an end.

That action, according to the girls, is in direct violation of the agreement with the company at the end of the strike, that all operators except two classes: (1) union officials and (2) operators with unsatisfactory records, would be reinstated in order of seniority.

The former operators assert the action of the telephone company has gone beyond a direct violation of the strike settlement agreement. They declare merchants and other employers have been influenced by the telephone company to refuse employment to former operators.

"All Boston doors seem to be closed to former telephone operators," declared a former operator, who has spent the past month painfully making the rounds of Boston establishments where women are employed. "They ask us where we were last employed, and when we tell them we were operators, they tell us there is nothing doing."

Many of the girls who have been banned from further service as telephone operators were earning as much as $28 a week. Many of them, operators, supervisors and junior chief operators, had been in the service of the company as long as fifteen years. Their positions have been filled, the former operators declare, by student operators at salaries of $13 a week.

Lawrence City Council Wants Strikers Put Back

Lawrence, Aug. 21—The City Council of Lawrence voted to ask for a conference with the officials of the New England Telephone & Telegraph company relative to alleged discrimination against 62 local girls.

The vote was taken on the motion of Alderman Peter Carr, who said that although 62 former operators had not been taken back, the telephone service was poorer than it was during the strike.

PROTESTS AGAINST NEW GARAGE FAIL

Over the objection of a score of residents of Trowbridge street, Cambridge, George A. Lock of No. 373 Harvard street, Cambridge, was given a permit to erect an eight-car garage at the same address by the Cambridge License Commission. The opponents to the proposed garage appeared before Fire Marshal George C. Neal, claiming the surrounding buildings will depreciate in value and also will be a fire menace and danger to many school children. Marshal Neal took the case under advisement and will visit the location before making known his decision.

CITY HALL TOWER IN LAWRENCE AFIRE

Lawrence, Aug. 21.—The second blaze within a week occurred in the old tower of the City Hall, caused, it is believed, by a torch carelessly handled by a workman. In the construction of the new City Hall, which is under way, the old tower is being preserved and the work on the new building is being carried on around it. The bell in the tower has for years been used as a fire alarm. When the blaze was extinguished, Deputy Chief Michael McPhee sounded the "all out" signal by striking this are against the bell-tongue.

Laughlin's right to receive a license has been suspended.

The registration of the plane, the property of the Atlantic Aero Corporation of Lynn, has been suspended.

YOUTHFUL TOWN TREASURER IS $2,000 SHORT

Washington, N. H., Aug. 21.—The discovery of a shortage of $2,000 in the town treasury caused Milton Plympton, twenty-five years old, said to have been one of the youngest town treasurers in the country to automatically relinquish his office after he had held it but six months.

The town authorities have announced they will take no criminal action against the young man, as restitution of the amount of the shortage will be made by a New York bonding company.

The bondsmen have in turn agreed to withhold prosecution of the young man pending the sale of the general store of which he was the proprietor, and the reimbursement of the company from the proceeds.

The police believe the young man's failure in business is to be responsible for his shortage. Bad bills are said to have ruined Plympton's financial difficulties. A keeper has been stationed at the cash register in the store.

Plympton came here with his family last May. He purchased the general store of A. M. Hamlin and started business. By March he had gained the confidence of the citizens to such an extent that he carried the election for town treasurer by a large majority.

HORSE'S HEAD CUT OFF BY AUTO; 2 HURT

Bridgewater, Aug. 21—Two men were injured and a horse was practically decapitated in a head-on collision between an auto and a farm wagon. The horse was later shot. The injured are John J. Quinn, No. 4 Prospect avenue, Charlestown, broken nose and severe cut over the eye. Thomas Byrne, No. 1 Concord avenue, Charlestown, badly cut and bruised. The horse was owned by the Locust Farm in North Middleboro. The collision occurred on Main street.

LEAKY LIFE BOAT CAUSE OF DEATH

Brookline Man Drowns at Hampden Beach, but Girl With Him Is Saved

Salisbury, Aug. 21.—A Brookline man drowned at Hampton Beach because the life-boat of the Coast Guard crew was so leaky a rescue could not be effected.

An investigation has been demanded.

In such condition was the boat that when put into the water it filled so fast the life savers had to work frantically to get it ashore before they drowned themselves.

The man who might have been saved was Ambrose Crowley of No. 185 Davis avenue, Brookline. He drowned at the South end of Hampton Beach. Miss Anna Meagher of No. 54 Union street, Brighton, bathing with him, was rescued as she became exhausted battling the heavy surf. Both had been carried beyond their depth.

Miss Meagher was rescued by Carl Smith. Smith almost lost his life endeavoring to rescue Crowley, who secured a death grip on Smith and almost pulled him under. "He held my arms," said Smith, "making it impossible for me to swim. I fought him till I was exhausted and barely saved my own life."

Life guards notified of the struggle in the water put off a boat. It looked so badly they had to return to shore. Crowley's body late today had not been recovered. With Miss Meagher and other friends Crowley had spent the week-end at Kathleen Cottage.

SERVED FOR COUPLE IN EVERETT

Mrs. McGeown Acted as Nurse, Companion and Business Manager for Harleys

Thirty years of devotion to duty brought its reward to Mrs. Elizabeth B. McGeown of Everett, now a gray haired woman of fifty years.

Through an agreement reached by arbitrators acting for Judge George F. Lawton of Middlesex County Probate Court, Mrs. McGeown is to receive $20,987.85 from the estate of Mrs. Elvira P. Harley of Everett, who died in 1920 without leaving a will.

The decision came after the arbitrators had learned how Mrs. McGeown had acted as housekeeper, nurse and business manager for Captain William Harley and his wife, Elvira, from the time she went to live with them as a pink cheeked girl in 1893 until both of them had died after years of invalidism and blindness.

PROMISED HER ALL.

When Captain Harley married Mrs. McGeown's aunt in 1893 the girl was just out of high school. She was pretty, talented and ambitious. Elizabeth told her aunt that she thought she would go into the millinery business where she could capitalize her artistic sense.

It was then that Captain Harley and his wife asked their neice to give up her career and come to live with them. "We have more than we can ever use," said Captain Harley and his wife. "We have a beautiful home. We will never be able to have any children. If you will live with me we will give you everything when we die."

So Elizabeth went to live with her aunt and uncle on the beautiful Harley estate at No. 33 Harley avenue, Everett. Captain Harley retired from the sea and entered into the stevedore business in Boston. As his health failed, Elizabeth gradually took over the responsibility of the business.

During the stevedore strike in Boston Captain Harley had a large number of men in his employ. Pay night came around and someone had to go through the picket lines of the striking stevedores with the weekly payroll. Bricks were flying and guns flashing around the entrances to the docks. Elizabeth tucked the bag of money under her skirt and made her way unmolested through the angry crowd of strikers.

BEG HER TO REMAIN.

As time went on Captain Harley became hott with age. He had a fall on the Harley estate and was unable to tend to his orchard. Elizabeth cared for the fruit trees and gathered the crop. Later Captain Harley became blind and required much attention. Elizabeth acted as his nurse.

Time also took its toll from Captain Harley's wife and she was unable to do her household work. Elizabeth took up the added burden of housekeeper. Then, in 1905, she fell in love with Thomas C. McGeown and gave him her promise to marry. She told the Harleys that she was going to leave them.

"Stay with us," said Captain Harley. "Have your husband come here to live. We will see that you get our all when we pass away, which will be soon now."

Elizabeth married and stayed on. Mrs. Harley finally became blind and Mrs. McGeown acted as [illegible] the two stricken old folks. Captain Harley died in 1914, leaving the entire estate to his wife. Mrs. Harley lingered on, an invalid and blind, until April, 1920, when she, too, died, also left no will.

Mrs. McGeown filed a claim for $36,000 against the estate in August, 1921. The estate totaled $34,000. Numerous nieces, nephews and distant relatives opposed the claim.

Judge Legatt denied a motion for a jury trial of the claim, but an agreement was reached in April of this year for the appointment of Walter B. Grant of Boston, H. Huntis Newton of Everett and Thomas L. Wiles of Hingham as arbitrators. The arbitrators made their decision and received the approval of counsel for Mrs. McGeown and the other claimants.

HOUSE 'CARRIED AWAY,' WOMAN SAYS IN SUIT

The return of a house is demanded in a bill of equity filed in Suffolk Superior Court by Mrs. Ella E. Morse of Brookline against Mrs. Alberta C. Hall and Mrs. Ida M. Gould, both of Neponset street, Revere.

The home was originally a one-story affair, built on posts. Recently it was remodelled into two stories. For ten years, according to Mrs. Morse, the house has been occupied, rent free, by Mrs. Hall.

About thirteen years ago, says Fred L. Norton, attorney for Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Hall purchased a lot of land on Revere street. Upon it she built the house. Later she moved the building to Ocean avenue. While there, Mrs. Hall contracted for another lot of land and paid a $20 deposit. That was all she ever paid, stated Mr. Norton.

Both mortgages were foreclosed and Mrs. Morse bought the land and the land title, giving her, she claims, title to the house as well as the land.

Eventually she sued for possession which was granted by the Land Court. Mrs. Hall argued that the house was personal property and not real estate.

Now Mrs. Hall has moved the house to the property owned by Mrs. Gould and, according to the bill, she refuses to surrender it.

Mrs. Morse, in her bill, asks the court to order the defendants to return the house to its original location on the Morse land.

It is estimated that the cost of moving the house will be around $300.

124,000 PUPILS EXPECTED WHEN HUB SCHOOLS OPEN

An increase of 2000 pupils is expected in the public schools of Boston, when they reopen Sept. 5, bringing the total number up to over 124,000. This estimate is based on the averages of past years. The William McKinley for grades from 1 to 7, on St. Mary's street, near the Brookline boundary, will accommodate 350 in its eight rooms. The John L. BUSINESS MEN BACK GUARD

Washington, Aug. 21.—The St. Paul plan, sponsored by one hundred business men of that city for the upbuilding of the Minnesota National Guard, was strongly commended today by General Pershing in a letter to John Seeger, president of the St. Paul Association, made public by the war department.

The business men's pledge to give preference to employes who are members of the National Guard and pay them during absence from work, General Pershing said, placed St. Paul "squarely behind the finest ideals of our public."

"It is my earnest wish that your example may be far-reaching," the letter said. "I shall watch the development of your National Guard with especial interest, as I believe it is bound to indicate the esprit which must come with consciousness of such splendid support."

SIX CONFESS STOKES' CASE PERJURY

New York, Aug. 21.—Four witnesses in the sensational W. E. D. Stokes divorce trial have admitted that they testified falsely, chief assistant district attorney Ferdinand Pecora said. The suit was brought by Stokes, a wealthy hotel owner, against Helen Elwood Stokes, his wife.

Mrs. Stokes is now seeking $1,000,000 damages from her ex-spouse. W. E. D. Stokes, Jr., "Waldie," as he is commonly known, on the ground that he was party to a scheme to defame her character.

"Mrs. Stokes sat in this office," said Pecora, "and four witnesses who had testified they had seen her in Elsie T. Wallace's apartment were called in. All had come to the district attorney's office in response to requests. All four witnesses admitted, in the presence of Mrs. Stokes and myself, that she was not the woman they had seen in Mr. Wallace's apartment."

SPANISH CRUISER SHELLS MOORS

Madrid, Aug. 21.—Although government officials maintain that the position of the Spanish forces in Morocco is not serious, two cruisers have been sent to co-operate with the military. One of these vessels, the Espana, has already been in action against Moorish trenches at Tifaruin.

Spanish batteries at Busafou, Taforfi and Benita succeeded in displacing concentrations of the enemy, says an official communique. The Moors shot down an airplane that was bombarding Tifaruin. Three Spanish officers, its occupants, were killed.

Leaves of absence in the army have been suspended.

Year's Best Selling Novel Reveals Mysterious Return of Youth and Beauty to Old Woman

START THIS BEST-SELLER HERE TODAY

A young and beautiful woman creates a sensation at a first night in New York by rising in her seat at the theatre and coolly surveying the audience through her glasses, after the European fashion. Clavering and his friend, Dinwiddie, are immediately interested, and the latter receives a shock, declaring that she is the image of a former society belle, Mary Ogden, though much younger than she should be at that time. He thinks she may be a daughter. Clavering follows Mary home from the theatre and aids her to get into the house as she has lost her key. She invites him in and tells him she is Countess Josef Zattiany. He nearly guesses her secret. He asks her to marry him. Clavering invites her to dinner at Sherry's and the opera. She promises she will tell him her secret the following Saturday. Meanwhile she calls a meeting of her old women friends and explains it to them.

"I am a coward, a coward" she thought heavily.

IT was a charming but not extravagant slip of bright green chiffon and suited her selfishness admirably, as he told her.

"I paid for it myself. I pay for all my gowns, as I think it consistent, for I can't afford the extensive dressmakers yet. At least I think I've paid for it. Witt says I haven't and that he expects a collector any day.

"But I must have described it. I told her to send the bill at once so that it wouldn't get lost among all the other bills on the first of the month. Your opinion, Jean, is simply stifling lately. Full of fire and ice, but rather—what shall I call it—explosive? What's happened, Clavey?"

"Good of you to encourage me, Susanna. I'd thought it rotten. What are you working at?"

"I've just finished a piece on John Dewey for the Atlantic. I was so proud when Witt said he hadn't a criticism to make. I'm on a review for the Nation now, and the new century has asked me for a psychological analysis of the Younger Generation. I'm going to compare our past-war mindset with all that is known of young people and their manifestations straight back to the Stone Age. I've made a specialty of the subject. Witt has helped me a lot in research. Dyon think he's gone off?"

"Gone off? Certainly not. Every columnist in town had accepted to say about the first instalment of his novel. Best thing he's ever done, and that's saying a lot. Strong as an ox, too. Why in heaven's name should he go off?"

"Well, baby's teething and won't let any one else hold her when she's not around," I added.

SILK handkerchief panted about his lively face, stumped heavily into the room, fell in a heap on the floor against the opposite wall, and in a magnificent bass growled out the resentment of Ortrud, while a rising but not yet properly lent pianist, with a long blonde wig from Miss Dwight's property chest, threw his head back, shook his hands, adjusted a cigarette in the corner of his mouth, and banged out the prelude to Lohengrin with amazing variations.

Elisa, with her profile against the wall and her hands folded across her breast, sang what of Elsa's prayer she could remember and with no apparent effort improvised the rest. Lohengrin pranced up and down the room barking out German phonetics (he did not know a word of the language, but his accent was an Teutonic as his helmet), demanding vengeance and threatening annihilation.

He brandished his pole in the face of Ortrud, stamping and roaring, then, bending his knees, waddled across the room and prodded Elsa, who winced perceptibly but continued to mingle her light soprano with the rolling bass of Mr. Church and the vociferations of the poet. Finally, at the staccato command of Mr. Todd's hoarsening voice, she toppled over into his arms and they both fell on Ortrud. The nonsense was over.

No one applauded more spontaneously than Madame Zattiany, and she even drank a cocktail. By this time every one in the room had been introduced to her and she was chatting as if she hadn't a care in the world. As far as Clavering could see, she had every intention of making a Napoleonic sweep of it.

The pianist, after a brief interval for recuperation, played with deafening vehemence and then with excruciating sweetness. Once more cocktails were passed, and then there was a charade by Todd, Susan Forbes and the handsome young English sculptress, which Madame Zattiany followed with puzzling interest; and was so delighted with herself for guessing the word before the climax that she clapped her hands and laughed like a child.

More music, more cocktails, a brief impromptu play full of witty the distinguished company, whose appreciation was somewhat dubious, and Miss Dwight led the way down to supper. Clavering watched Madame Zattiany go out with the good-looking young editor of one of the staid old fiction magazines which he had recently severed out of its rut by the wayside, cranked up and driven with a driven with a magnificent gesture into the front rank of Youth. She was talking with the greatest animation. He hardly recognized her and it was apparent that she had entered into the spirit of the evening, quite reconciled to any dearth of intellectual refreshment.

The supper of hot oysters, chicken salad, every known variety of sandwich, ices and cakes was taken standing for the most part, Madame Zattiany, however, once more enthroned at the head of the room, women as well as men dancing attendance upon her. Prohibition, a dead letter to all who could afford to patronize the underground mart, had but added to the spice of life, and it was patent that Miss Dwight had a cellar. More cocktails, highballs, sherry, were passed continuously, and two enthusiastic guests made a punch. Fashionable young actors and actresses began to arrive. Hilarity waxed, impromptu speeches were made, songs rose on every key. Then suddenly some one run up to the victrola and turned on the jazz; and in a twinkling the dining-room was deserted, furniture in the large room upstairs was pushed to the wall and the night entered on its last phase.

Then only did Madame Zattiany signify her intention of retiring, and Clavering, to whom such entertainments were too familiar to banish for more than a moment his heavy disgust, hastened to her side with a sigh of relief and a sinking sensation behind his ribs. Madame Zattiany made her farewells not only with graciousness but with unmistakable sincerity in her protestations of having passed her most interesting evening in New York."

Miss Dwight went up to the dressing-room with her, and Clavering, retrieving hat and topcoat, waited for her at the front door. She came down radiant and talking animatedly to her hostess; but when they had parted and she was alone with Clavering her face seemed suddenly to turn to stone and her lids drooped. As she was about to pass him she shrank back, and then raised her eyes to his. In that fleeting moment they looked as when she had met them first: inconceivably old, wise, disillusioned.

"Now for it," he thought grimly as he closed the door and followed her out to the pavement. "The Lord have mercy——" And then he made a sudden resolution.

Madame Zattiany did not utter a word during the short visit to her house. It was evident that she had dismissed the merry evening from her mind and was brooding on the coming hour. At the top of the steps she handed him the latchkey, but still lingered outside for a moment. As he took her hand and drew her gently into the house he felt that she was trembling.

"Come," he said, his own voice shaking. "Remember that you need tell me nothing unless you wish. This idea of confession before marriage is infernal rot. I have not the least intention of making one of my own."

"Oh!" She gave a short harsh laugh. "I should never dream of asking for any man's confession. They are all alike. And I must tell you. I cannot leave you hear it from others."

He helped her out of her wrap and she threw the lace scarf on a chair and preceded him slowly down the hall.

"I am a coward. A coward," she thought heavily. "Have I ever felt moral cowardice before? I don't remember. Not toward any other man who loved me. But —Oh, God! And I shall never see him again. How shall I begin?"

She was totally unprepared for the beginning. She heard him shut the library door, and then it seemed to her that her entire body was encircled by flexible hot bars of iron and her face, her mouth, were being flagellated. If he hadn't held her in that vise-like grip she would have fallen. She lay back on his arm as he kissed her and for the moment she forgot the past and the future and was happy, although she felt dimly that life was being drained out of her. She was passive in that fierce possessive embrace. She had lost all sense of separateness.

"I won't listen to your story," he muttered. "This is no time for talk."

His voice, hoarse and shaking as it was, broke the spell; with a sudden lithe movement she twisted herself out of his arms. Before he realized what was happening she had run across the room, snatched the key from the door and locked it on the other side. He heard her run up the stairs.

Clavering did and said most of the things men do and say when balked in mid-flight, but in a moment he took the little key from the drawer in the table and poured himself out a whiskey and soda—he had taken almost nothing at the party—lit a cigarette and threw himself into a chair. He had no desire to stride up and down; he felt as if all the strength had gone out of him.

But he felt no apprehension that she had left him for the night. Nor should he take possession of her again until she had told her story; he reflected with what humor was left in him that when a woman had something to say and was determined to say it, the only thing to do was to let her talk.

She was giving him time to cool off, he reflected grimly, as he glanced at the clock. Well, he felt heavy and inert enough—hideous reaction! He was in a condition to listen to anything. If she was determined to work her will on him, at least he had worked his on her for a brief moment. She knew now that in the future she might as well try to resist death itself. Let her have her last fling.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

IN work Betty finds forgetfulness and comfort, so it seems to her failing in with my plans as a matter of suiting herself as well as me. That there might be more to it than this didn't occur to me.

Early Saturday morning I tried to reach Ralph Lacy. I was eager to start the search for Neal as quickly as my promise permitted. But Ralph was out of town for the day. I left messages at his office, his apartment and club, and so I wasn't surprised when he called me early Sunday morning.

"Hello, Anne—looking for me?—he asked cordially. "Here I am and proud to have you nagging me. What can I do for you—safer do for myself than for you?"

"That's how you feel, is it?" I laughed. "You are an unselfish and gallant gentleman. Well I've a job for you. Could you run up right after breakfast? I want to have a consultation with you and I'm catching the 11:40 for Dreamwold."

"You were catching the 11:40 —but are not now," corrected Ralph with a delightful chuckle. "My new car is in fine working order. I had it out all day yesterday and I wasn't late for a single appointment. So now I'm proud to offer myself as your John. I'll chauff you and jimmie out to Dreamwold."

"No—the train will do. I protested.

Ralph Unconvinced

"I know, you think you're putting me out," said Ralph, undaunted by. "But I'm going up to Aunt May's. You promised to drop in today. I'll go round the long way to Dreamwold and let you say howdy."

"It's not that," I explained, ashamed of my own hesitancy. "But Jim's up at Dreamwold already waiting for me, and I really hadn't refused to be self-conscious."

"All right. Fine!" he said heartily. "I'll just telephone Jim me I'm calling for you and driving you out. He'll be glad you don't have to ride in a stuffy train on a golden day like this. Even allowing for a stop at Aunt May's you'll be there for dinner at one and that's about all the 11:40 would do for you. Can you be ready in an hour? Well, have our coffination on the drive out."

"I shall be as you say. Oh, master of all you survey," I said with a lash of high spirits that astonished me.

Then Ralph made me, "A river dance," and I sang the first part of Italian farewell that promises another meeting soon. Whereupon I rushed through breakfast and made ready for the trip.

I selected a dress of blue moreen crepe. With it I wore a green hat and Phoebe's jade necklace. Neal had given me the jade beads on the terrible evening of her sudden death, hanging me willy to wear them since they made him feel that part of Phoebe was with me. Now his disappearance I hadn't been able to bring myself to wear the necklace. But now I had another purpose in slipping it on. I had a message for Virginia and it was a guardian for me. Ralph came promptly at the end of an hour and we were out. I told him of my determination to institute a country-wide search for Neal.

"You're right," he announced tersely. "I may as well confess until I have been waiting for this. Thought you'd come to it."

"And probably wondered why we were dilly-dallying around," I added.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

KEEPING COOL AT HOME

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.+
(Former President of the American Medical Association)

ARE you feeling the heat oppressively at home?

You may not be able to get away —you or your family, or even the children—for that precious outing on the farm or at the seashore or in the mountains.

Then why not bring the air, especially the temperature of the farm, the seashore and the mountains to your home?

It can be done in many homes at a trifling expense by a very little attention to some of the fundamental laws of nature.

The law with which you are dealing in the present instance is that heat expands and cold contracts all gases. The atmosphere consists of gases, therefore I am expands.

Here is a way you can "pull" cold air into your house:

Provide yourself with a plain box with a lid. The box should be one foot wide, eighteen inches deep, and long enough to fit into one of your upstairs windows.

Bore twelve one-inch holes through the outer wall of the box, two inches from its top, and a similar row of holes through its inner wall nine inches from the top. It would be a convenience to have a little drain in the bottom of the box.

Then, having simply fitted this box in the upstairs window by putting the sash down upon it, proceed as follows:

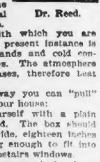
Leave all the windows of your house freely open during the night.

Early in the morning, by sunrise if possible, open all interior doors, pull down all the windows, close all outside doors and keep them closed except to go in and out.

Put twenty-five pounds of ice in the box in the upstairs window.

In the course of an hour all air that comes into the house will be the air that is cooled by contact over the ice, and the used air will be going out under the crack of the door downstairs—both facts being readily demonstrated by the flame of a lighted match.

I have known a twelve-room house treated in this way on exceedingly hot days to remain from fifteen to twenty degrees cooler than the heated outside atmosphere.



Dr. Reed.

SQUAD OF 60 TO REPORT FOR WORK

Boston College will hold its first football practice on September 4 the day after Labor Day.

This date allows less than a month before the opening tilt with Providence Co. lege at Braves Field, Septembe. 29. During that time Coach Cavanaugh, who returns from New York this week, has one of his greatest problems on his hands.

Coach Cavanaugh

The greater part of last years squad will return for practice at Alumni Field more than sixty candidates being expected. Only three of the 1922 team, "Doc" Comerford "Bill" Kelleher and "Jack" Heaphy were lost by graduation.

Grattan O'Connell, whose wits helped to win last season's Holy Cross game, or Ed Harrison will replace Comford at end, and Joe McKenney, or some other lucomin recruit should fill up the hole in the backfield to help Captain Darling, Ward and Cronin.

Cav's main problem is then to make a centre to bolster up the tremendous gap left by Heaphy.

Most of the other stronger replacements also must be looked for among the freshman candidates. A large group of huskies are expected from the Greater Boston prep and high schools.

Nee kept trying to get over a kayo smash. A few of his rights landed high on the jaw, but they failed to stop Friedman's persistent attack.

Reds Have Bare Chance to Nose Out Giants

By NICK FLATLEY

Three-fourths of the baseball season is now history, and the thrills left until the Fall classic, as they call the World's Series, roll around are few and far between.

The Cincinnati Reds have an outside chance to nose out the Giants. Apart from that, everything is all set, except a few little scraps for place which will not raise a ripple except in certain localities.

Said Reds, who come here next week, are now four and a half games away from the roof. That doesn't seem much of a gap, but it is just the same.

Pat Moran

Figures show very clearly what a spurt the Westerners must make, and how the Giants must stall, to have a pennant fly anywhere except in the big city.

The Giants have 37 more games to play, the Reds 40.

If the Giants do better than just break even—and there's no reason in the world to suppose they will not do that little thing—they will win 19 and lose 18 ball games, and finish the season with the following rating:

Won.	Lost.	PC.
93	61	.604

To beat that mark the Reds must collect 26 pastimes, and lose only 14. It's no more reasonable to expect the club, already ruded jolted from a real contending spot, to do that than it is to figure the McGraws will do likewise. Hoping that Cincinnati will since another wild rush, while New York stumbles and staggers doesn't influence happenings on the ball lot in the least.

The Giants are out in front, and comfortable. They had a long siege of the doldrums, and didn't lose their lead. They have too much class to repeat the little stumbling stunt.

Patricius Moran has a ball club that's game and capable. But at this stage of the race every defeat saps just a little more of the confidence that is so necessary to come up from the ruck.

* * *

Baseball interest in this part of the universe is mostly centered on next year. The boys are mildly concerned in the efforts of the local teams to get out of the cellars, but only mildly. Braves and Red Sox have chances to do that, and will if they keep on trying when the other clubs show the chronic season end fag.

FIRPO'S BARNSTORMING GAVE HIM EXPERIENCE

ARGENTINIAN BEGINS HIS TRAINING FOR DEMPSEY

By ARTHUR STRUWE

But Jack Dempsey is skeptical of the wild bull's claims. Never before in the history of the ring, has an aspirant for the heavyweight championship postponed boxing and football matches to train for a fight that might not be on. October or Novmber would have been early enough to prepare for such a contest.

But the Argentine would not heed Richard's advice. Although Firpo made a creditable showing on his trip he opponents were only second raters. But there always is the chance of a lucky punch putting the Argentine to sleep. Now that he is back, he is breathing easier, for the success of the bout—financially—is assured.

If Harvard is to lose the services of Charley Eastman and Princeton the services of Herb Treat, the Crimson and Tiger coaches will have a real task of supplying real successors

GRIDDERS START EARLY

COACHING CHANGES IN SEVERAL COLLEGES

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Can Percy Haughton succeed where "Buck" O'Neil failed?

That is a question that local football fans are asking as the 1923 grid season draws near, for the founder of the Haughton system, which lifted Harvard from the rank to the front rank in the college football world, has elected to return to active coaching as the football chief of Columbia University.

For three years Buck O'Neil, who ... successively ... Tufts, Colgate, Wesleyan and Harvard, ... filled the post ... has assumed ... could not ... of football ... terest of the New York ...

During O'Neil's first year at Columbia ... for the Light Blue's poor record ... material, or lack of it. The second year found the material ... improved but ... The third year ... Don Roderick ... better things ... Buck but they failed to ... And now with Koppish and Roderick no longer eligible ... Kopnish having graduated and Roderick having played at Wooster College and Boston College before ... switch to Columbia, Percy Haughton will endeavor to succeed where O'Neil failed.

That Haughton is a coach few will deny. Whether he is entitled to be ... or not, will be revealed this season.

SOME CONTEND HAUGHTON IS A SUPER COACH.

Some contend he is a super-coach—that his record at Harvard is proof positive of the fact. Others point to the fact he was singularly blessed with remarkable material while conducting Harvard football.

This year, so far as it is now known, Haughton will have but ordinary material and Columbia's showing will be entirely to his credit.

Columbia is but one of several of the larger institutions of the land which have shifted coaches since the close of the 1922 season, for Dartmouth has engaged Jess Hawley to direct its football; Pennsylvania, has appointed Lou Young as John Heisman's successor; Glen Warner, ... a prominent figure in Eastern football ... moved to the Pacific Coast where he will handle the Leland Stanford team, and there are other notable changes in the list of 1923 grid coaches, and without exception the appearances of the eleven under the new directors, will add a new note of interest to the early season contests this year.

HAWLEY HAS FINE FOOTBALL RECORD

Hawley, the new Dartmouth coach, goes to Hanover backed by a real reputation, for after his graduation from Dartmouth he served as coach of Iowa State and under his direction that institution, for the first time in its history became a factor in Western Conference football. Hawley left Iowa State to serve as advisory coach to Curtis Sears at Dartmouth. Two years ago he was an assistant coach at Princeton and last year he gave considerable time to his former alma mater in preparing the Green for the Harvard game.

Thus he has kept in active touch with the game, and as he boasts an ... personality, Dartmouth ... are expecting great things ... him.

Lou Young, the new Pennsylvania coach, has been serving first as scout and later as assistant coach for Heisman, and assumes the role of head coach for the first time. Young is a graduate of Pennsylvania, and a thoroughly likable young man, but his ability as a director has yet to be tested.

Suspend Waite Hoyt After Attack on Umpire

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Waite Hoyt, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, was suspended indefinitely by Ban Johnson, president of the league, after his attempted attack upon Umpire "Brick" Owens.

Bill Barrett of the White Sox, was called safe on a close play at the plate in Sunday's game when he scored the run that won in the eighth inning.

Hoyt protested the arbiter's decision and made vain efforts to strike Owens. Other players restrained him and he was led off the field.

Boston American s Swim for U. S. Long Distance Title

The Boston American will stage a great long distance swimming race to Boston Light for the American championship.

It will be the biggest event of its kind ever held. It will rival in interest the struggles through the treacherous waters of the English Channel to the shore of France.

Every long distance swimmer of prominence in the United States will be asked to compete in this monster water classic. It is expected that the classiest field to ever take part in a long distance swim will face the starter's gun.

Other swimming contests to Boston Light have ended without any contestant being returned a decisive winner. Most of these events have also been more in the nature of local affairs. The Boston American's swim will take in the stars of the entire United States. It will be a blue-ribbon classic.

The date of the big swim will be announced in a few days. Meanwhile send your entry to John B. Gillooly, Sporting Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

GENARO IS OUT FOR WORLD'S HONORS

After twice defeating Pancho Villa, world's flyweight champion, and acquiring the American title by virtue of his last victory, Frankie Genaro is now gunning for the world's title, which is held by Villa.

Genaro, who ... proved a sensation in his long ... appearance in Boston, will return here on August 29 to take on the latest sensation in Pacific ranks.

He is Bobby Wolgast of Philadelphia, who has been piling up victories at the expense of the topnotchers in Philly rings, and who is hailed as the next bantam champion.

Wolgast is only a mere strip of a boy, and he will not have many ounces on Genaro when they meet here. The last time Genaro came here, the fans referred to him as the watch charm fighter on account of his size. He weighs only 111 lbs.

Yet, in spite of this handicap, Genaro is a snappy puncher. He is an artist in the ring, as he demonstrated when he showed here and there are few boxers in any class, who know more about the art of self-defense than the little champion.

Boston fans, who have enthused over the work of Pancho Villa, can easily understand the ability of Genaro when they learn that Villa has never beaten his title rival. In three fights, Genaro was victorious on every occasion.

The little champion is bucking up against a tough customer in Wolgast who won the verdict the last time they met. Now Genaro is anxious to get even, and the fact that a decision will be rendered at the finish does not seem to bother him in the least.

Oils Are Lower and Independent Steels Higher in Quiet New York Trading

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

The best forecaster in America tells us to expect better business. That is the prophecy of early made by the New York stock market last week, when advance followed advance day after day and the volume of dealings increased.

• • •

While most quite encouraging. Good, a distant delivering [illegible] of the entire wheat [illegible] mark. Corn and [illegible] declined rise and is now [illegible] per [illegible] more than [illegible] went higher. [illegible] seasonal [illegible] Canada [illegible] carryover the world has known in years, and [illegible] confidence in the domestic [illegible] general business have been helpful influence. An analysis of the whole situation suggests that the worst is over for grain growers.

• • •

Developments both in raw cotton and in cotton goods have been distinctly encouraging. Quotations for the staple having moved around a 23c point, manufacturers have resumed placing orders. Moreover, the demand for goods has quickened, particularly in New England, and more confidence in the outlook has developed.

• • •

Last week's 67 commercial failure changes were equally divided between advances and reductions, a different tale from that told during recent months. Not only so, but the most of the advances occurred where they are most needed to balance and strengthen the general business situation, namely, among agricultural products.

• • •

The week brought a favorable as well as favorable developments.

Widespread attention was paid to the tremendous expenditure of oil, and oil securities naturally suffered. Oil leaders, however, are not novices at handling such a problem, and the set-back may prove only temporary. This is certain to emerge sooner or later as a source of disturbance likely to prove quite temporary.

• • •

Some recession in building materials was interpreted as marking the passing of the peak in construction operations. Even should construction [illegible] slacken appreciably, this would not be wholly harmful, since it would mean more attractive prices for materials and more real wages. Fortunately, the general boom always carry with them [illegible] and the 1922-23 building boom has [illegible]

• • •

[illegible] Eighth shared, too, were not conducive to cheerfulness. Germany is now eclipsing Russia's record of currency debasement—fifty-eighty billion marks was the latest outrage. Notwithstanding alarming appearances one finds in responsible circles here a disposition to look for a distinct turn for the better in Europe in the very near future. It is felt that Britain's firm stand will not long continue to be flouted by France. Moreover, Stresemann is expected to address himself earnestly to averting the further invasion of the Ruhrland and to offering impossible terms than those previously listed in by Cuno.

• • •

After having been out of active touch for two weeks, I have been impressed anew my return by the improvement that has occurred in sentiment, both in the financial world and among industrial leaders.

• • •

Last month was an undertone of apprehension, not to say nervousness.

The undertone is now one of hopefulness, even confidence.

• • •

For my part, I still believe that [illegible] handling of affairs at home and abroad can be made satisfactory business and full employment in this country. With few exceptions, the main factors at home are unusually healthy, unusually sound, unusually strong.

Prices are becoming somewhat more balanced. Money and credit are certain to continue abundant. Wage advances are being kept within bounds—the chief menace is not likely to be protracted. Stocks of manufactured goods are below [illegible] than above normal. The agricultural outlook should improve. The increasing power of America's wage earners is greater than ever before [illegible] Their interests are common with those of [illegible] and have been [illegible] to cope with [illegible] recognized as [illegible] universally [illegible] open [illegible] Recognition [illegible] Mexico is imminent. Our latest [illegible] [illegible] returns have been [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Washington, Aug. 21—In order to get good photographs of the solar eclipse last month it may be necessary to send out expeditions of scientists to other countries, even in the War torn parts, it was said today by the professor of astronomy at Harvard University, who said that in regard to the certainty of success in picturing the phenomenon, and obtaining valuable data.

The project, as suggested by Major General Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, provides for the sending of Lieutenant John A. Macready, holder of the world's altitude record, and Lieutenant A. W. Stevens, an expert aerial photographer, to a height of 20,000 feet to make the photographs during the eclipse.

The flight will take place at Rockwell Field, San Diego, Cal., on September 10, in the path of the total eclipse.

Photographs and data secured, an announcement of the plans said, could be made available to scientific bodies. From this altitude on a clear day it is believed that perfect photographs of the earth, surface features and shadows for a considerable part of the interval between the beginning of the eclipse and the totality

BLACK CASKETS GROWING OUT OF STYLE

The public is getting away from black in the selection of caskets for their departed. The custom adopted during the War is being replaced gradually by gray, with an occasional touch of lavender and purple, and even ocean in remote instances.

While the "style" is running more or less to livelier colors for the cloth coverings, the metal trimmings have been softened to a dull finish, in contrast with the highly polished effects of years. Caskets of quartered oak and mahogany also are keeping pace with modern demands for beauty, latest innovations in the casket of solid metal—a chemically treated iron which resists rust. This either is covered with bronzecloth of the varied colors or may be finished to resemble mahogany or oak.

Michael J. Porcella

Still another departure from the old form are sarcophagi of solid bronze, weighing from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds. These are of old Egyptian design and set in mausoleums.

Generous display of the latest in caskets are on exhibition at Horticultural Hall as a feature of the forty-third annual convention of the Massachusetts Undertakers' Association, at which members are in attendance from all sections of this state.

The three-day session was opened today with an address by President Michael J. Porcella of Revere and a banquet and dance will conclude the program.

HERE THEY ARE; HAND-PICKED LOCAL LAFS

"Don't cry, little boy, you'll get your reward in the end."

"Suppose so. That's where I always get it."

By Louis H. Naise, P. O. Box 280, Providence.

"My son is certainly getting on in college."

"What now?"

"How is he chairman of the committee on cowbells and freshmen on the night of the class rush."

By Mrs. Crosby, No. 7 Park street, Chicopee.

Minister (to flapper): "Would you like to join us in our new mendonary movement?"

Flapper: "I'd love to. I'm crazy about those new dances."

By Mrs. Thomas H. Black, No. 216 Cherry street, West Newton.

In addition each week the Boston American selects fifteen of these jokes, epigrams, mitts and gags and they are reproduced in miniature pictures and shown in various theatres of Greater Boston. A total of $25 in prizes is awarded the authors of the jokes used on the screen, beginning with a first prize of $5 and tapering down to twelve dollar prizes.

LEVIATHAN BEATING OLYMPIC IN RACE

The American steamship Leviathan will, barring accidents, beat the White Star liner Olympic (British), in their trip across the Atlantic. They left New York at about the same time Saturday. For the first forty-eight hours the Leviathan, according to wireless, made 1,038¾ miles, 528 the first day, 580¼ the second. The Olympic covered 483 miles on the first day, 520 on the second, a total of 1,003.

However, the White Star representatives disclaim any race. They say both steamers are maintaining their regular rates of speed.

SISTER GIVES BLOOD TO AID BROTHER

Newburyport, Aug. 21.—Leonard Smith, twelve years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Smith, No. 67 Kent street, was run over by a laundry truck operated by Eli Stone, No. 8 Howard street, on Lincoln avenue, Salisbury, and seriously injured.

An elder sister gave about a quart of blood which was transfused to the veins of the boy, who is now somewhat but who is still on the danger list at Anna Jacques Hospital.

SHAMROCK ON SAILS OF NEW CONTENDER

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 2—A huge shamrock will adorn the sails of the new fishing schooner "Shamrock" when she enters the races off here next Monday for the Lipton trophy. It was announced today by her owners, O'Hara Brothers, Boston fish dealers. The shamrock will be painted on the sails, and witnesses to the big races next Monday will therefore find no difficulty in picking out the new contender.

Blind workers who were thrown out of employment by the closing recently by the state of the Cambridge workshop will hold a mass meeting of protest in Rhodes Hall, No. 40 Prospect street, Cambridge, tonight. The plant was closed when the state commissioners found that the shop was being operated at a loss. The workers, according to Edward G. Young Ladies, Please Notice These Two Faces

And Two Ways of Doing the Hair—Kindly Do Likewise

MRS. COOLIDGE WHEN THE PRESIDENT FIRST SAW HER. THIS IS AN AMERICAN LADY.

MR. COOLIDGE'S MOTHER WHEN SHE WAS FIRST MARRIED. THIS ALSO IS AN AMERICAN LADY.

For the observation, inspiration and rebuke of modern young women, these two photographs are printed. You see Mrs. Coolidge, when she was teaching school in Northampton, Mass., on the day when the President first met her.

You see the picture of Mr. Coolidge's mother, from a photograph taken just after her marriage to the President's father

Please contrast these two AMERICAN LADIES with many of the old and young women of today

These women did not have their feet harnessed up like a Shetland pony in red, blue or green shoes, and the soles of their stockings almost touching the sidewalk.

They did not know the meaning of the word "roughhouse" and they did not think it beneath the dignity of a free, independent American girl or woman to act in a dignified, ladylike, reserved manner.

These two are AMERICAN LADIES, and that had something to do with the fact that one of them MARRIED the President of the United States, while the other CREATED a President of the United States

If your conjugal ambition, young ladies, is a lounge lizard, or what our humorous friend TAD calls "a drug store cowboy," these pictures will NOT interest you

But if you would like to have the generation that is coming know you and look upon your face with respect, as this generation looks upon these two fine faces, you will pay attention to the story that these faces tell.

They tell a story of earnest, thoughtful life, with appreciation of life's seriousness and of its duties.

Notice especially, if you please, the way in which these two ladies, wife and mother of a President, arrange their hair They don't cover their ears with twisted curls. They don't drag the hair down over the forehead or over one eye.

They don't try to look like something they are not or to attract attention by foolishness. The spirit within is what attracts attention in these faces. So it should always be.

Study especially the manner in which the President's mother arranged her hair as a young bride. That arrangement appears to the Boston American as IDEAL. It shows the ears, that tell of character. It shows the forehead, which is by 1,000 per cent. the most important part of the face. It shows the shape of the head.

Imitate this hair arrangement, young ladies. Please believe us when we say most earnestly that such an arrangement of the hair as this is worth ten thousand PERMANENT WAVES.

This hair means PERMANENT COMMON SENSE, far more important than a permanent wave

"Stone Walls Do Not a Prison Make"

But Debt Isn't the Worst of It—for England

"Stone walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a cage." That's all right in poetry, but it doesn't suit England when she learns from experts that the rock of Gibraltar does not make an impregnable fortress.

It has been until now the key to the western door of the Mediterranean, and England held the key. No one could go in or out without her permission.

But fences and gates mean nothing to the bird that can fly over them. And Gibraltar, door to the Mediterranean, means nothing to flying machines that can fly over. They could destroy the fortifications in their flight, dropping explosives on it. And, what is more annoying, long range guns located in Africa could shoot the big rock to pieces.

Nothing is safe that stands still to be shot at in modern wa

SHOT FIRST BRITISH SOLDIER

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 21.—Earle Brown, sheriff of Hennepin County, is a direct descendant of Captain David Brown, the first Colonial soldier to kill a British trooper in the Revolutionary War.

Sheriff Brown recently made application for membership in the Sons of the American Revolution. In his application he stated that his Colonial forefather, a captain of the Concord Minute Men, raised his own rifle, ordered his men to open fire, and brought down the first British soldier killed at the Battle of Concord on April 19, 1775

The Name of Cabot

Editor Boston American:

I see by Friday's American that a couple in Philadelphia with a name hard to pronounce or even spell have had their name changed to the historical name of Cabot.

The doctrine of America announces to the world the inherent right of man to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness If the changing of a name can contribute to this result, a man is entitled to this change.

There are so many men in competents bearing historic names that it matters little who may assume them. No man is responsible for the deeds of all birth Christ was born in a stable, Lincoln in a log cabin.

The children of the immigrants made America. Two Italian sailors, John and Sebastian Cabot, born in Venice, Italy, sailing under the English flag, explored the North American coast. We Americans of Italian extraction of the race of Caesar, Columbus, Cabot and Napoleon have done more for the American republic and the white man's civilization than all the other countries of Europe combined. We are glad that the other races acknowledge [illegible] by voluntarily assuming Italian names.

PROSPERITY BEGINS AND ENDS ON THE FARM

By Herbert Kaufman

RAIN falls in Texas and cotton instantly declines a dollar and a half a bale.

Expectation of five million more bushels of wheat this week further depresses the grain market.

Abundance isn't proving a blessing to our farmers, six hundred thousand of whom, Senator Capper predicts, will abandon a feckless vocation within the next twelve months.

Writing for the New York Times, he says in part: "The new legislation enacted by Congress at the suggestion of the farm bloc is in no sense class legislation. Prosperity in the city and the country is like the Siamese twins. City business men cannot hope to make the best profits unless the farmers are making the money. Agriculture is the basic industry, and it has been sick; the contagion has spread to other lines."

He's right. Economic and human bodies work alike—every part is interdependent. A sore foot provokes a feverish head; amputate an arm and the whole system suffers a shock. Impoverish any group of producers, and the earnings of banker, milliner and automobile maker—labor's wages, corporation dividends and office salaries—promptly drop.

Don't make the assinine mistake of believing that dollar wheat doesn't affect your pay envelope or your concern's prospects, too. Everybody's best customer runs a plow

However, despite the unfavorable condition of agrarian affairs, pioneers still trek westward.

If Jacob Avers keeps requiring progeny, he'll require quite a reservation for his own collection of families.

Beginning with six children by a first wife, he marries a widow with three, and shortly after takes a third spouse, who brings thirteen to his table.

Paris is dumbfounded to read that "Mademoiselle Germaine Langlois is happy to announce the birth of her daughter, Marianne Emma."

Controversy is already boiling in France over the innovation. Expect to find columns devoted to the same discussion in our own papers. Extreme feminists will approve the girl's course. Protagonists of a stricter social order will regard it as a challenge to society as constituted.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON ART AND POSTAGE

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE new French postage stamps bearing the portrait of Pasteur are attracting a good deal of attention The issuing of these stamps by the government is taken as a recognition not only of the merits of this great French scientist but of the right of science, in general, to hold a more conspicuous place in the official sun than it has occupied in the past

Pasteur's noble head, now appearing on every denomination of French postage, is an acknowledgment that political rulers and plotters and military heroes are not always the most suitable representatives of the essential greatness of a nation.

These new stamps are another reminder that the French are a people of artistic tastes and capacities which go rather beyond us. I am not an artist or an art critic; I have only my appreciations of such matters, but it seems plain enough to me when I put one of the Pasteur stamps side by side with one of our own stamps bearing the head of Washington that there is here a lesson for us to learn, if only we will take it in good part.

It is not well to give up everything to science, leaving nothing for the aesthetic side of our nature. Art can aid science perhaps more than science can aid art. There seems to me to be a touch due rather to science than to art in the machine-like design and finish of the Washington medallion portrait as compared with the free delineation of Pasteur's face and head set against an indefinite background.

The French design is exempt from the tyranny of detail which is so manifest in the other. The conspicuous, but pinching, oval frame, and the elaborate laurel wreath in the American design tend to belittle what should be the sole feature of the stamp, viz., the head of Washington.

Then why the ugly and awkward designing of the neck? Did Washington always (or ever) wrap up his neck and occupy his chin that? But it is the general effect that is always to be regarded as the test of excellence, and there in my opinion the superiority of the French stamp is obvious

I have ventured into this discussion of a question that is strictly out of my line because there ought to be no better way to awaken public attention to the desirability of a wider popular education for us in matters of art. They are able to turn out better things of this kind in France, and elsewhere in Europe, than we can make, because they have a public widely educated in that sense

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

MARRIAGE BY CAPTURE

By Temple Manning

NESTLED among the mountains adjoining west Turkey is a little country of a million inhabitants that has kept its individuality and ancient customs through thousands of years. This country is Albania, where life is much as it was when the Turks conquered it, in the fifteenth century.

Since then the national life has been a constant bitter struggle against the Turks. But the brave Albanians have not allowed this circumstance in any way to affect their characteristics as a nation.

The tribal system still prevails. Each tribe is a unit and is regarded as a large family. Each has its own chief, laws and traditions.

Because of this feeling of blood relationship, marriages between members of the same tribe is forbidden.

As a result, a very interesting and unusual condition arises which is a survival of the caveman age. This is marriage by capture.

This custom, of course, is common in countries where civilization has not tempered the primitive instincts or refined the social conditions. But in Albania, situated in the very heart of civilization, the knowledge of such a proceeding comes as a shock to the traveler.

Precisely as their early ancestors did, the young men of Albania seek their wives today.

On the morning of her wedding day, a young Albanian girl is seized by her father and brothers and is carried to a place halfway between her home and the home of her bridegroom.

She cries and struggles and begs and pleads to be set free. But the stern father and brothers pay no attention to her. They carry the weeping bride to the place where they know the bridegroom is waiting.

In ancient times, of course, the bride was captured after a very real fight. Today the form of the ancient custom is observed, but it is only a form, even as the efforts of the bride to escape from her father and brothers is merely to observe the tribal custom.

To the person who views such a scene for the first time, however, the reluctance of the bride and the fierceness of the bridegroom as he and his friends swoop down upon her is very real. The bridegroom seizes the bride and rides away with her to his home as his forefathers.

She Taught His Lordship To Toddle —

(And Then He Toddled Off!)

(C) 1923, by Jack Miller, Inc.

What the Dainty Yankee Charmer Taught the Romantic Young Peer, the Peer Taught the Romantic Young $4,000,000 Widow--- So Piccadilly's Guess Went All Awry

Leonore Hughes, the Dancer Whose Toes, (Broadway Was Sure), Were Twinkling Her Toward an Earldom.

Mrs. Arthur Capel, London's "$4,000,000 Widow," to Whom Lord Burghersh Is Engaged.

LONDON.

THIS is the surprising story of the dainty, dancing American, Leonore Hughes, who taught a stunning young British lord to toddle, and then, just as everybody was sure she'd marry him, saw him toddle off—into the arms of a widow with four million dollars!

The story is surprising because—as every bright little Broadway pupil knows—the British nobility is composed of a lot of wealthy bachelors with no mission in life save to marry American showgirls. Park a peer next a stage beauty for two minutes, and what happens? Matrimony—every time. Just look at Jessica Brown and her earl! And—but there have been so many.

The nobility being that way, almost anyone along Broadway could have told you a year ago that Leonore Hughes would toddle, so to speak, to the altar with Vere Anthony Francis St. Claire, Lord Burghersh, son and heir of the old Earl of Westmorland and "buddy" of the Prince of Wales.

They met in London when the toddle was the dance of the minute and young Lord Burghersh—who could waltz and fox-trot and even trip the tango—was muttering, "If I could only learn to toddle!" as he breezed about town o' nights with the Prince as his boon companion.

"Burgy" and the Prince are well known to London sun-dodgers. The King has been known to grumble because the Prince—generally with "Burgy"—went night after night to the same snappy revue and afterward escorted some stage beauty to the Club Royal or Murray's or the Grafton Galleries for a jazz whirl before whirling home.

On one of his after-theatre jaunts with the Prince, Lord Burghersh said, "Love! That's a lovely girl!" She was Leonore Hughes and she was dancing then with Maurice at a London night club, having succeeded Florence Walton, divorced wife of Maurice, as the famous dance professional's partner.

So his lordship learned to toddle. Miss Hughes taught him—first at the night club, and then, so the London gossips say, at a series of private lessons. And every time they toddled past in public, eyebrows and tongues waggled and waggled and waggled.

Could it be possible (asked the lifted eyebrows) that Mayfair's "ivory bachelor," the debonair intimate of the Prince of Wales, who seemed to have made a pact with his chum to go single to the grave—could it be possible that Cupid-proof Lord Burghersh, who accepted so nonchalantly the breaking of his engagement to Lady Violet de Trafford, was about to succumb to the enchantment of a little American dancing girl?

It is not only possible (replied the clacking tongues) but from the way he looks at her and trails after her and pulls wires to have her dance at town functions and country fetes, it appears Burghersh is very, very smitten. The old story of the stage and the peerage, you know!

Miss Hughes sailed for America and some haughty hostesses of Berkeley Square drew long breaths of relief. Perhaps, after all, they wouldn't have to face the problem of what to do about it in the event their guest list was swelled by the dancing wife of a very popular beau.

But the relief of the dowagers was temporary. President Harding called an international disarmament conference in Washington. Admiral Beatty was a member of the British delegation. Burghersh had served with Beatty in the North Sea during the war as a lieutenant in the British Navy. Beatty took Burghersh to America with him as his aide.

Disturbing tales began to float back to London from Broadway. Maurice and Hughes were dancing nightly at a Broadway supper club. And nightly—or almost nightly—the Congressional Limited brought to New York a young man who did not seem nearly so interested in bombs and battleships as he did in toddling with the fair Leonore.

"Who is he?" murmured Broadway, and the answer tinkled back, "A British lord, doncha know! She taught him how to toddle in London."

And when, on one particularly hectic night at the popular dance club, Lord Burghersh sat at a table near the polished floor, and Maurice and Hughes floated by, and up went the lovely Leonore's dainty foot, and off it whisked her little slipper right into the applauding hands of the enamoured Burghersh, then Broadway knew there wasn't any doubt left.

"I saw the slipper," declared one more-or-less Innocent bystander, "and believe it or not, but the coat-of-arms of the lord's family was engraved on the silver buckles in diamonds and everything!"

"Go on!" scoffed the rail-birds. But, nevertheless, the rumor flew, "They'll toddle to the tune of Mendelssohn before long. You know these Englishmen—a cat may look at a king, but let a duke look at a Yankee cutie and you have to get an injunction to keep him single!"

That's the way matters stood when, suddenly, the old Earl of Westmorland died and Lord Burghersh succeeded to the title. Broadway prepared to bear with fortitude the flitting of one of its favorite butterflies overseas to the altar and the earl.

What Broadway didn't know was that the old Earl of Westmorland was far, far from rich. As a matter of fact, the joint income of himself and his wife during his last years was less than $12,000 per annum. And Lady Westmorland was the sister of the Duchess of Sutherland.

Not long before he died, so straitened were the earl's affairs, he was forced to sell the ancestral home, Apthorp Hall. He got a million and a half for it, but the estate was mortgaged up to the hilt and debts ate up what was left when the mortgages were paid.

All of which may have had nothing to do with what followed when Lord Burghersh became the fourteenth Earl of Westmorland and sat down to examine the wreckage of his disappointing inheritance.

Broadway and Piccadilly know only this:

That there is in London a very rich and beautiful young widow, Mrs. Arthur Capel, eldest daughter of the picturesque Lord Ribblesdale, and therefore the step-daughter of the former Mrs. John Jacob Astor, whose marriage to Ribblesdale took place some time after the death of her husband on the steamship Titanic;

That Mrs. Capel's first husband, Fe.y Lyulph Wyndham, was killed at Mons with his regiment, the Coldstream Guards, in the first few weeks of the war, leaving his widow his entire estate;

That Mrs. Capel's second husband, "Boy" Capel, as he was known to society, went unscathed through the war as a cavalryman at the front, but lost his life at Nice in a motor accident, and that his estate totaled more than $4,000,000, every cent of which Mrs. Capel inherited;

That, lastly, the English newspapers have formally announced the engagement of Mrs. Capel, richest widow in England, to Vere Anthony Francis St. Claire, Lord Burghersh, fourteenth Earl of Westmorland!

Of course, nobody whispers that the match was influenced by money, for Mrs. Capel is a beauty and is the same age as the earl, which is just thirty. But Broadway is surprised—almost as surprised, perhaps, as Leonore Hughes, who is dancing in Paris now instead of along Piccadilly.

And Broadway showgirls, in their study of English history, may write a new line in their note-books, just beneath that old copy-book maxim about the horse and water. It is, "You can teach a lord to toddle, but beware lest he toddle off!"

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

EVERY once in a while when you find a large family, you find a black sheep in it. He's the guy who never comes home unless he gets broke or married or until something else terrible happens to him.

THIS is the guy who spends eight hours a day in the western Union office. Fifteen minutes wiring for the money and the rest of the time waiting for it.

NO matter how little his family sends him he always saves a couple of dollars out of it so that he can telegraph for more.

IN olden days the black sheep used to come home with the dough to pay off his father's mortgage. Nowadays when he comes home the father has to mortgage the house to pay him off.

IN Sunday school he learned the quotation, "ask and you shall receive," so he practices it in every letter he writes to his folks.

BUT he's usually a hard working chap. If you don't think it's hard work getting money out of some parents, just try it once.

ONE father wired to his son and said, "My dear boy, you can't get blood out of a turnip." The son wired back, "Dear father, I have plenty of blood, what I need is cash."

AS a rule it takes money to get money, but a black sheep generally telegraphs collect.

BUT very few sons ever wire back and thank their parents for the money. The only time they send two wires is when they don't hear from the first one.

THE average father likes to feel that he can bank on his son, but the average son wants to bank on his father.

ONE guy sent his father so many sight drafts that the old man caught cold and died of pneumonia.

YEARS ago a black sheep used to humiliate his family by marrying a chorus girl. In those times it was a disgrace, today it's an achievement.

NOW, unless a chorus girl marries a millionaire, her family feels embarrassed.

AS a rule there's more money at the stage door of a theatre than there is in the box office.

A BLACK sheep user to fall in love with an actress and to show that he cared for her he'd offer her every cent that his father had.

BUT his promises were like alimony. Try to collect it.

STILL there's an old saying, "Give a man enough rope and he'll get married.

THEN pretty soon he'll have some lambs, and it won't be long before one of the dark ones will be wiring him for money.

A CHICGO man has two sons, one of them runs a blind pig and the other is a black sheep, and only last month they forced their father to join the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals.

CALL ON THE SHUT-IN AND BRIGHTEN THE DAY

Nothing has such a depressing effect upon sick persons as to feel that those whom they have considered good friends do not think enough about them to call when they are ill.

Hours and hours in a sick bed give one time to think.

It is disheartening to realize that one's friends are going on their happy way without much thought for the one who is laid up.

It seems to the sick one that it could not be much of a sacrifice to give an hour or so a day or even semi-occasionally to the one who is compelled to remain at home day after day.

And they are pretty near right, for all invalids feel the same.

You resolve that tomorrow you will make a call; tomorrow goes by, and the next day and the next until the friend gets about again, and then there is regret at lack of fulfillment of a duty.

Someone in your neighborhood cannot leave home.

Why not make a call on the shut-in.

You may not know the person, but knowing the need you ought to be willing to give a little of your time to brighten the day for the afflicted.

A Social Error.

Jinks—I understand that the Newlyweds are not on speaking terms with Joe McGuff.

Binks—Yes, when they were married he threw horseshoes at them to wish them good luck.

Good Enough!

Phil—She's very chic, isn't she?

Will—Quite natural! She comes from Chicago!
